Doctors Present at Clinic During Police Raid

CALL DOCTOR TO COURT

A police drive on a large number of birth control clinics throughout the Greater Boston area was forecast today following a raid last night on the Mothers' Health Offices at 8 Vernon street, Brookline, and the seizure of a card index listing similar clinics in Greater Boston.

An order of notice aimed at breaking up continued operation of the Brookline clinic was issued against Dr. Ilia Galleani, society-physician of Beacon street, Boston, and an alleged leader of the clinic, by Judge Philip S. Parker today.

The order, returnable in the Brookline district court August 15 calls upon Dr. Galleani to show cause why property seized by police in the clinic raid should not be confiscated.

It was issued under that chapter of the state statutes prohibiting the keeping or distribution of contraceptives, or dissemination of birth control information.

Though no complaints have been issued as yet against principals in

FIND AIRLINER IN SEA; FEAR 14 ABOARD DEAD

ARMY PLANE SIGHTS SHIP OFF PANAMA

Washington, Aug. 3 (AP)—The War Department received a message from the Panama military establishment today asserting an army plane had located the missing Pan-American-Grace Airways flying boat 30 miles northeast of Cristobal, but had found no signs of life near it.

The brief radio message said merely that the air liner, which carried 11 passengers and a crew of three, was located "totally under water with no sign of life."

U. S. WARSHIP SPEEDED

Shortly afterwards, the navy said the aircraft tender Teal had been ordered to the place where the airline submerged.

A message to the navy department said a fleet airbase plane also had sighted the missing plane.

"Fleet airbase plane sighted an engine section minus engine of the missing plane, about 765 degrees, 20 miles from Colon Breakwater Light," the navy message said. "No personnel or additional wreckage sighted. Search being continued for possible survivors."

Earlier the naval authorities in the Canal Zone had ordered the destroyers S-41, S-45, S-46 to join other surface vessels and aircraft in the search for the missing airliner.

The luxurious Pan-American-Grace amphibian, the Santa Maria, took off yesterday from Guayaquil, Ecuador, for Balboa in the Canal Zone.

With a woman and two children in its cabin, the plane, en route from Guayaquil with transfer passengers from Lima, Peru, seemingly overshot its Cristobal port in a cloudy sky at dusk last night.

VETERAN PILOT

At that hour, the Santa Maria's wireless signals were heard so strongly at Cristobal that it was assumed the plane was over the field there. But nothing more came from the plane.

Pilot Stephen Linn said then he was seeking an opening through the clouds for a descent into the Cristobal airport. He was evidently unable to pick up a landmark that would give him the field's direction.

Dunn, veteran of eight years of flying in Latin America, is thoroughly familiar with the coast line on both sides and with the surrounding country.

MAYOR HURLS THREATS TO BOLT QUIZ

In the bitterest clash ever to take place between a mayor of Boston and the Finance Commission, Mayor Mansfield and members of the commission shouted charges back and forth today, throwing the Codman Hill Construction Co. investigation into a tumult.

The uproar threatened to bring an end to the public investigation as the mayor declared he would quit the hearing.

He charged the case had been prejudged by four of the five commissioners and he demanded their withdrawal.

"This is a farce; I would be justified in walking out," he shouted.

In the end, he said he would continue to appear as a witness, but would also present his case to the public. A long recess was ordered to restore peace.

The clash was one of many during today's session and tempers were already on edge.

WANTS SULLIVAN OUT

E. Mark Sullivan, former chairman and now a member of the Finance Commission, started the bitter wrangle by alleging "infamy" and asserting the mayor would "have to share it with his department heads."

The mayor got to his feet and protested against Sullivan's sitting as a member of the board any longer.

He charged that Sullivan had prejudged the case. He said he was appearing as a witness, not as a defendant, and he then demanded that Sullivan withdraw.

"Other members have also made up their minds on this case, and they ought to withdraw, also," he said.

SHOUTS "JURY PACKED"

Continuing, while members of the commission tried unsuccessfully to interrupt him, the mayor shouted:

"These proceedings are a farce.

15-Year Trip to U.S. Wins 6th 'Exclusive'

Following is the sixth winning story in the Boston Evening American-Sunday Advertiser EXCLUSIVE contest, in co-operation with Paramount Productions. It is a feature story by a Somerville wife telling about her husband who at the age of six months was "marooned" in Ireland, when his parents died and then travelled practically around the globe before he reached the United States again—at the age of 15. Mrs. Mary Degnan Smith tells the story in her own words and she also wins a chance—if she wishes—to be a reporter for a day. The last $50 EXCLUSIVE will appear tomorrow and will consist of the prize-winning review of the Paramount Picture, "Exclusive", now at the Metropolitan Theater.

Wife of Mellon Heir Files Suit for Divorce

Pittsburgh, Aug. 3 (INS)—Mrs. Grace Rowley Mellon today shocked Pittsburgh society by filing a suit for divorce against William Larimer Mellon, Jr., heir to oil and bank millions. She charged desertion.

Mellon is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Mellon, and a nephew of former Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon.

In 1930 Miss Rowley announced at almost the scheduled hour of her wedding to young Mellon that they had eloped to Wellsburg, W. Va., a year before. They now live in Sewickley Heights, exclusive suburb. They have one child, William Larimer, III, born October 19, 1932. Mellon is 27, his wife 28.

Trio Raid Belfast Minister's Home

Belfast, Northern Ireland, Aug. 3 (AP)—Three armed, masked men broke into the home of Sir Dawson Bates, minister of home affairs, today, beat his servants with revolver butts, ransacked his desk and files, and escaped.

The raiders were believed to have been Irish Independence Extremists seeking police documents concerning the terrorism which broke out here and on the Free State border when King George and Queen Elizabeth visited Northern Ireland last week.

ONE QUIN STRICKEN; OTHERS GUARDED

EXCLUSIVE!

Victim of a mysterious infection, little Emilie Dionne, one of the five famous quintuplets in Callander, Ontario, lay ill today.

The sudden catastrophe which darkened the little kingdom of the "gold-dust-quins" was revealed today by Dr. Alan Roy Dafoe, physician to the quintuplets, by direct telephone to the Boston Evening American.

Called from the child's bedside, Dr. Dafoe readily admitted that Emilie's condition was "worrying" him.

"Emilie is suffering from a respiratory infection," he said. "She has been running a mild temperature for a few days and at first we attributed it to the heat.

"Today, however, I've called in Dr. Alan Brown, physician-in-chief of the Sick Children's Hospital in Toronto. He is here with me now.

"I want to verify my belief that this infection was contracted outside of the Dafoe Hospital. Both Dr. Brown and myself are making a careful and thorough examination of the child."

Hoping to keep the infection from spreading to the other four children, Dr. Dafoe said he had quickly ordered Emily isolated in a separate part of the hospital, and put a day and night nurse in charge of the sick baby.

HE BLAMES VISITOR

"So far the infection is mild," he continued, "but we are taking no chances. It's raining here today and we have kept the other children indoors.

"I can't help but feel that this sickness has been caused by someone outside who carried the germs into the hospital."

Dr. Brown, who has served as medical consultant to the children

WONDERLAND REVERE

World Zionists Rally Against Palestine Plan

Zurich, Switzerland, Aug. 3—The British proposal to partition Palestine was the storm center today as the 20th annual Congress of the World Zionist organization convened here.

A bitter conflict was foreseen over this burning issue, and strong opposition to approval of the British royal commission's recommendations prevailed.

While Dr. Chaim Weizmann, president of the organization, appealed to the delegates not to reject the British scheme when he addressed one section of Zionists in Town Hall, the opposition sentiment was felt strongly when M. M. Ussishkin, president of the board of directors of the Jewish National Fund, was designated to preside over the 483 delegates from 30 countries.

DEBATE IN SECRET

So grave was the problem considered that the Zionist general council decided to recommend that the congress abandon its traditional open debate and consider the issue in executive session as a political commission tomorrow.

Dr. Weizmann declared he was convinced that it is possible to develop a Jewish state in the Holy Land by placing certain limitations on the partition scheme, even to the extent of bringing in 2,000,000 Jews during the next few years.

Dr. Weizmann's stand was upheld by Nahum Goldmann and Professor Selig Brodetsky, both leading delegates. Goldmann urged the acceptance of the partition plan by the congress.

He pointed out that if they should reject it, England would not force the issue and the Jewish people might lose a historic chance which might not repeat itself.

Ussishkin, speaking to another section of zionists, appealed to the delegates to turn down the proposals and described it as a "misfortune for Zionism and for Jewry."

A short meeting of the Zionist general council was held to adopt a plan of procedure for handling the explosive issue. The Jewish telegraph agency reported that the congress' decision on the plan will be delivered to the permanent mandate commission of the league next Saturday by Dr. Weizmann.

DECISION BY FRIDAY

Dr. Weizmann's declaration on the subject is expected to be made Wednesday morning, and the congress will be asked to render its decision on or before Friday, as that it may be communicated to the commission at once.

Leaders of world Jewry were on hand early for the opening session of one of their most significant meetings in years.

The British proposal is now before the mandates commission of the League of Nations and is encountering substantial opposition from many quarters. It was advanced by the British government as a means of settling ancient religious and economic conflicts between Jews and Arabs in the Holy Land.

Weizmann, while a bitter critic of the partition proposal, was expected to try to reconcile divergent viewpoints which split the Zionist delegates.

The labor group, dominant at the congress, was expected along with the West European group to press for complete rejection of the British plan on the ground that the proposed Jewish state would allow no sort of expansion.

The East European group, notably represented by the Polish Jews, was on the other hand in favor of any scheme that would permit continuance of some form of free immigration into Palestine.

"Nazi Day" Fete Protests Sent To U. S. Solons

Special to Boston Evening American

New York, Aug. 3—The non-sectarian anti-Nazi League, of which Samuel Untermyer is president, yesterday sent the following telegram to H. C. McLaughlin, city manager of Kenosha, Wisconsin, protesting the holding of a Nazi day in that city on August 8.

"We protest the holding of a Nazi day by the Milwaukee chapter of the Nazi-German-American Volksbund in Washington bowl at Kenosha on August 8. The Nazis operate Camp Hindenberg on the Milwaukee river, 20 miles north of Milwaukee.

"Storm troopers delegations are to attend from Chicago, Illinois; Milwaukee, Racine, Sheboygan and Kenosha, Wisconsin, and from South Bend and Hammond, Indiana.

"Your city alone has 100 uniformed Nazi storm troopers. We urge you to refuse permit for such Nazi-sponsored affairs."

England Blamed For Strife in Holy Land

Zurich, Switzerland, Aug. 3 (AP)—Dr. Chaim Weizmann, president of the World Zionist Organization and the Jewish Agency for Palestine, charged Britain tonight with responsibility of the Holy Land's ills.

Dr. Weizmann told the twentieth zionist World Congress here that the British plan to parcel Palestine into sovereign Jewish and Arab states and a mandated sector was based on a "fundamental misconception."

The difficulty he declared, could be traced to "half-hearted administration, which failed to make a serious attempt" to carry out the mandate.

An atmosphere of strong opposition to the British Royal Commission's plan, up before the League of Nations mandates commission at Geneva, pr evailed at the opening Congress session today.

Dr. Weizmann denied what he said was the main British "thesis"—that the present mandate is inherently unworkable."

6 on Missing Sloop Headed for Cup Races from N.S.

Halifax, N. S., Aug. 3 (AP)—A radio alarm was broadcast today for six men unreported since Friday in an old 40-foot sloop.

Coastal stations were asked to keep watch for the sailing vessel Phantom, not heard from since she called at Lunenburg four days ago en route to the America's cup races at Newport, R. I.

The Phantom was an old yacht that had been put back into the water this year after several years of idleness. She was forced to put back into port on an attempt to reach Newport two weeks ago when her keel dropped out off Halifax.

CLASHES WITH FIN. COM.

BIRTH CONTROL DRIVE PUSHED

the clinic, Lieutenant James Terra, who led the Brookline raid, today stated it is likely several complaints will be brought within a few days.

Chiefs of police in all Greater Boston cities where clinics were listed in the files confiscated were notified of their existence and locations today.

Armed with a warrant issued quietly in Brookline court yesterday by Judge Parker, a police squad rushed into the Mothers' Health offices, reported to be backed by Brookline mothers, last night while a group of women awaited examination and treatment.

LITERATURE SEIZED

The raiders seized a quantity of alleged contraceptive and literature and took the names of six social workers, including two doctors, against whom they said they will seek complaints today for violation of "birth control" laws.

The health clinic occupied seven rooms on the first floor of the building and when the police entered 12 women, described as young "wives" were receiving instructions. Police said they were informed all of the patients were from Boston. Present were two women doctors, Dr. Gallozzi, who was in charge, and Dr. Lucille Lord-Heinstein.

The clinic is operated by the Birth Control League of Massachusetts, whose North Shore Mothers' Health Center in Salem was recently raided and the leaders taken to court. Lieutenant Terra said that the Brookline clinic had been under surveillance for some time.

SOCIETY BACKING

With its distinguished society backing the Brookline clinic had been operating for five years and Attorney Walter Barrows of Wellesley, representing the Birth Control League, said he was at a loss to understand why the raid was staged.

As far as the league knew, there had been no complaints against it, he said. The action was taken to mean the police will attempt to close up clinics throughout the state.

Dr. Lord-Heinstein, who resides at 402 Columbia road, Dorchester, was one of the defendants who was found guilty and fined $100 following the Salem raid.

At that time birth control leaders said they planned to defy the court ban, adding that their clinics would continue to operate in spite of the decision of the court and the fines imposed.

Probe Mill Charge

An investigation was begun today by the Minimum Wage Commission of the charge of Representative Joseph W. Dooley that women are working 40 hours a week and getting as little as $7 a week in at least one Taunton silk mill.

ever since they were born, confirmed Dr. Dafoe's suspicions.

"I've just seen Emilie," he said. "I confirm Dr. Dafoe's diagnosis. There seems to be infection and we are unable to find any evidence that it could have been contracted in this hospital.

"Every member of the staff has been examined. There is no clinical evidence that any of them are harboring a like infection."

ONE OF STOUTEST QUINS

Increased precautions for protecting the youngsters from seeing persons, outside the hospital staff, were immediately ordered by Dr. Dafoe.

"It would have been impossible for Emilie to have taken this germ from the crowds who daily visit the children here," Dr. Dafoe concluded. "They are kept behind screens and windows and never mingle with the crowds. I think it must have been a visiting delegate to the hospital and such visits will be promptly discontinued."

It is Emilie who celebrated her third birthday with her four little sisters by pulling out all of the electric light plugs in the hospital in a moment of high-handed frikiness.

Although not the tallest, or the heaviest of the children, Emilie has been a normal child's progress. She is the most friendly and most loving of the five.

MOST INQUISITIVE

She also has the most spirited temper and when there is any childish trouble brewing, the nurses have found Emilie is at the bottom of it.

"Her mind seems to work so rapidly," they have said. "Every new toy is just a challenge in Emilie to take it apart and see what 'makes it work.'"

In the film career of the quintuplets, it was Emilie that the directors and Hollywood stars depended on for leadership and cooperation.

State-wide Search For Brookline Girl

A state-wide police search for blonde, 16-year-old Irene Aston of Elm street, Brookline, was launched today. The girl was reported missing since Sunday from her aunt's home at Billerica.

The girl, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph W. Aston, who had been visiting her aunt, is described as having blue eyes, weighing 115 pounds, five feet eight inches tall, a scar on her right wrist. She was wearing a blue dress, white shoes and no hat.

AIRLINER LOST OFF PANAMA

navy air base at Coco Solo combed the area south of here for the plane, last heard from when it reported bad weather at 7.15 p. m. last night.

The full text of the terse message, sent to the clipper at Army Signal Corps here by the signal officer of the Panama Canal Department, said:

"Missing Pan-American plane located 30 miles northeast Cristobal. Totally under water. No sign of life."

Finding of the airliner climaxed a widespread search effort launched by the army and navy, on sea and in the air. The Navy Department revealed a total of 65 planes, the aircraft carrier Teal, the survey ship Nokomis and the destroyers Taylor and Babbitt were ordered into the search this morning.

On the Atlantic side of the isthmus, officials said, 20 navy patrol planes, three navy amphibians and 14 army planes were ordered out on the hunt, while two navy patrol planes, one navy amphibian and 25 army craft.

The Pan-American clipper scheduled to take off at 6 a. m. today for Miami, Fla., and with which the missing ship was to have made connections, cancelled its flight and joined the search.

All other Pan-American-Grace Airways ships also were taken from regular service to hunt the big Sikorsky amphibian, which was flying from Guayaquil, Ecuador. The pilot was Stephen Dunn.

2 U. S. Officials Among Passengers

New York, Aug. 3 (AP)—Two Department of Commerce officials from Washington, a representative of the National City Bank of New York, and an employee of the Ford Motor Co. were among the 11 passengers on the plane, with three new members, were aboard the Pan-American-Grace airliner reported missing today in the Canal Zone.

The list, made public here by John H. McGregor, vice-president of the company, did not contain home addresses of the passengers, with the exception of the Commerce Department officials and the bank official. It follows:

THOMAS WAGELY, National City Bank, New York.

REX MARTIN, Department of Commerce, Washington.

G. Q. CALDWELL, Department of Commerce, Washington.

OSCAR MILLER, Ford Motor Company.

MRS. AMY LEVERING, wife of a Pan-American-Grace employe, and her son, Jimmy, and daughter, Jefie.

ERNEST WOOD, Pan-American-Grace employe.

Fin. Com. Moves To Grill Codman Head on Money

"I am talking before a packed jury. I would be justified in walking out and laying the case before the public. Commissioner Sullivan ought to be ashamed of himself."

Sullivan retorted that the Finance Commission back in 1936 "exposed many of these facts" and that contractors had been mulcting the city.

BITTER PERSONALITIES

"You are a prejudged juror," said the mayor.

"We are not jurors, we are sitting as grand jurors," said Sullivan. "We know the facts before the hearing started and we are giving the public the facts about the rotten system going on under Mansfield."

Mayor Mansfield shouted:

"There, the cat is out of the bag! The commission decided the outcome of this case at a private hearing."

Sullivan retorted:

"I made up my mind last April. You had your contractor Looney and your accountant."

"You're looney!" said the mayor.

"I never said I was a candidate for mayor," shouted Attorney Farnum at this point.

URGES FARNUM RETIRE

"When this case started, four out of five members of the Finance Commission had made up their minds in advance," said the mayor. "Chairman Lasker is the only fair-minded member. Mr. Farnum also ought to retire from the case. Haven't you made up your mind?"

Farnum declined to answer and the mayor stated:

"I am going to the public with my statement, although I will continue to appear here. It is perfectly obvious what your report is going to be. It won't be unanimous, however. Chairman Lasker, in my judgment, is a good lawyer."

Lasker declared a recess of two hours and a half and the spectators, pouring from the gallery, surrounded the mayor and the members of the commission, shouting congratulations to one side or the other.

CITES CASH ERROR

Earlier today the mayor "corrected" the commission's figures on the amount of business done with the Codman Hill Construction Co., declaring it was not $411,000, but $349,000.

The mayor also challenged accuracy of testimony given by George Driscoll, White Fund clerk, and Eliot Wadsworth, president of the Boston Chamber of Commerce and one of the White Fund trustees.

The Finance Commission sprang another surprise today by voting to try to bring William J. Driscoll, Codman Hill president, from Charles street jail on a habeas corpus writ, to testify as to the cost of "the Codman Hill profits."

IN JAIL FOR MONTH

Specifically Driscoll will be asked what became of some $129,000 alleged to have been drawn in large sums from the Codman Hill concern's bank account and from his own account.

Of this amount, $34,000 was transferred from the company's bank account to Driscoll's and withdrawn immediately, according to the commission.

Driscoll has been in jail for a month for failing to produce his books, which he states were stolen.

Another feature of today's hearing was the quizzing of Mayor Mansfield by Farnum about patching work.

The custom for many years has been for the city to designate the private paving firm to which public service corporations must hire to patch the streets, after the laying of pipes and wires.

Farnum wanted to know how much of this business the Codman Hill concern received during the last three years, but the mayor said he did not know, as only the records of the various private corporations would show that.

SCOLPONETI STOPS MAYOR

Today's hearing was only beginning when a protracted clash occurred.

Mayor Mansfield wanted to read another statement supplementing his statement of yesterday. Commissioner Joseph A. Scolponeti objected, saying that statement-reading was all over.

"I'm a member of this commission," retorted Scolponeti.

"A very minor one," shot back the Mayor.

"Nevertheless, I'm stopping you right now," said the commissioner.

CITIES $61,632 ERROR

Before Farnum had a chance to say anything, the city's chief executive accepted the commission's ruling and handed his statement to the press. But Farnum told him he could read it.

Getting his statement back again from the press table, the mayor stated on authority of Assistant City Auditor Daniel J. Falvey, that the White Fund paid the Codman Hill company $137,531 and other departments paid $212.18, a total of $349,717.

'YOU'RE A WITNESS'

"You deduct that from your false figure of $411,000 and you'll find an error of $61,632," he said. "This error appears to be incredible, amazing and shocking.

"My complaint is that you have been using false figures for two months. Do you now admit your $411,000 is wrong?"

"No, I do not," replied Attorney Farnum.

Attorney Farnum then took up the city charter requirement that all contracts for more than $1,000 have to be advertised for competitive bids. The mayor said he recalled that City Auditor Charles J. Fox had said this was not necessary in the case of the White Fund.

Q—Do you know if the trustees thought these contracts were being advertised? A—I have no way of knowing that. That's a fourth dimensional question.

Sullivan snorted:

Q—Mr. Wadsworth said he was very much amazed" A—Mr. Wadsworth never said that before the trustees. I am not required to account for what Mr. Wadsworth says. I'm testifying for Frederick W. Mansfield.

Q—Mr. Wadsworth admitted he had expressed himself quite vigorously at a meeting of the trustees." A—He did not and he expressed no amazement at all.

SULLIVAN TAKES UP QUIZ

Here Commissioner Sullivan took up the questioning:

Q—If subordinates are inefficient, or worse, how long can a chief executive be excusably retained in office after the system over which he has power and control has broken down? A—It doesn't necessarily follow that the chief executive would be thrown out.

Noted Philatelist Feared Suicide

Washington, Aug. 3 (AP)—Police dragged the Potomac river today in a search for the bodies of Michael Kidness known as the "father" of the Postoffice Department's Philatelic Agency, and Charles Boyd, 18, Portsmouth, Va.

Kidness, widely known figure in philately, established the agency in 1922 and was superintendent of of the department's division of stamps until 1933. He sent a special delivery letter to a friend telling of his intention of committing suicide. A few hours later the friend was found near Memorial bridge.

A pedestrian on Highway bridge last night found a note reading:

"I, Charles Boyd, jumped off this bridge at 8:45. The one thing I wished in life I could not have. This is the end."

Tech Student Faces 3 Auto Charges

Charles F. Tillinghast, Jr., 25-year-old Technology student and son of a prominent Providence, R. I., textile executive, was arraigned in Central Municipal Court today on three automobile violation charges.

The charges were brought against the student after he allegedly crashed into the rear of a police cruising car of the Back Bay station last night on Marlboro street, near Exeter, injuring two police officers.

Tillinghast was held in $700 bail after pleading guilty to operating under the influence and operating so as to endanger. He pleaded not guilty to operating without a proper license.

Officers injured in the collision were James J. Morgan, 36, of South Waverly street, Brighton, and James F. McKenna, 31, of 1 Strathcona Station, Boston. Both were treated at City Hospital for cuts and bruises.

The car Tillinghast was allegedly driving was registered to Sarah H. Stikes, Wayland, police said.

Everett Firehouse Blast Burns 2

His face and body seriously burned, Fireman Blake of Engine 3, Everett fireman, of Swamp street, was rushed to Whidden Hospital today, when an explosion rocked the Central fire station.

His name was placed on the danger list.

William Murphy, 18, a WPA worker, of Corey street, Everett, was also taken to the hospital, suffering from minor burns.

Blake was removing the tops of 50 supposedly empty gasoline barrels with an acetylene torch, when one of the barrels exploded.

Duchin Grieves for Wife He Wooed With Music

TRAGEDY HITS NOTED N. E. PIANIST

"Margie, I'm Always Thinking of You, Margie . . ."

The orchestra at the swanky Central Park Casino in New York went into this tune for the fourth or fifth time during an evening a few years ago.

Not a few of the dancers—New York's social set—grew heartily tired of it. But they knew one thing for certain.

He knew she was there and so . . . "Margie, I'm Always Thinking of You, Margie."

SOCIALITE HEIRESS

What did it matter if the Cambridge boy started his musical career by attending the Massachusetts College of Pharmacy and that the girl he loved was heiress of one of New York's distinguished family's fortunes?

And that was the spectacular romance developing in the Central Park Casino, of Eddie and Marjorie.

She went there with friends to whom Eddie was just another performer whose piano melodies and arrangements satisfied their whims.

But they met and their admiration was mutual. Their love affair was swift and inevitable.

And unlike most romances of the sort, in which a girl of high station and a youth not born to the revel purple of American society figure, the families of the two did not frown on the romance. In fact, the girl's mother favored it.

WHILE SOCIETY FROWNED

When they stepped to the altar June 5, 1935 in the apartment of Mrs. Marjorie Oelrichs, mother of the beautiful bride, there was no indignation over the mixture of social stations involved.

And this was remarkable since Newport and New York's smart set colony is adamant in upholding its rigid code that socialites must marry within their own levels.

And Eddie's family? They said: "We think it's very lovely and we wish them all the luck in the world," adding that the marriage was "no surprise."

Duchin and his wife were in Boston last February, when the young orchestra leader played a week's engagement at the Metropolitan Theater. His wife talked freely of their marriage and said she was not a bit dismayed over the fact that her name was dropped from the Social Register because of her marriage.

RAPPED SOCIAL REGISTER

"Persons whose telephone numbers are not published in the public telephone book may be found in the Social Register," she said. "It's very good as a supplement to the telephone book."

The young Cambridge orchestra leader was always accompanied by his wife in his various tours. She spent most of her time backstage in the dressing room with him.

When she married Duchin, she explained:

"I love music, so why shouldn't I marry an orchestra leader?"

And, with these words, into the discard went the words Marjorie spoke before she met her husband:

"I approve of European men as lovers, loiterers, dancing partners and sportsmen because they lack ambition," she once wrote in a magazine article.

PIANO VS. PILLS

But in a typical American marriage ceremony she was wed to the handsome young man who decided that he could make more people happier with a piano than dispensing pills in the back room of a drug store.

Eddie got his first chance when Leo Reisman took him to New York. Eddie, then in his early twenties, had already been graduated from the pharmacy college in the Fenway.

In between numbers while playing for Reisman, Eddie tickled the ivories, much to the delight of the patrons—people like Mayor Jimmie Walker and John Wanamaker—and the management.

About two years later Eddie was leading his own orchestra.

It was the cause of a local boy making good in the big city.

He was featured over leading radio programs, in Hollywood musicals, and was playing in Chicago when word came that "Margie" was ill and needed him.

He lost the race with the stork—and then he lost her.

But his theme will still go on.

Found Dead in Home

The death of Edward F. Foley, 37, of Washington street, Somerville National Guard member, found on the floor of his home by his mother, was pronounced due to natural causes today by Medical Examiner John J. Reardon.

They were married in 1935. She died today in New York after giving birth, last Wednesday, to a nine pound baby boy. He wept at her bedside as the end came.

according to attaches of the sanitarium.

Mrs. Duchin, the former Miss Marjorie Oelrichs, a society beauty, underwent a series of blood transfusions in an effort to save her life.

She and Duchin were married June 5, 1935.

Mrs. Duchin was 29 years old, a year older than her husband.

Before her marriage, she was one of the most active society belles in New York. Her mother, Mrs. Marjorie Oelrichs, gave her full scope to her energies. She encouraged her in conducting an exclusive dress shop and in writing.

In 1927, Miss Oelrichs created virtually an international controversy through a magazine article under her name, in which it was asserted that the foreigner who married an American girl for her money was an exception.

WATCHED DUCHIN PLAY

After the publication of the article, Miss Oelrichs said American men are handsomer and healthier than foreigners and that everything in the article was not just as she had written it.

When her engagement to Duchin was announced, she explained she had first fallen in love while watching him night after night, play the piano in his orchestra. They were married in her mother's suite in a fashionable hotel.

As the result of her marrying "out of society," her name was dropped from the Social Register.

Nazis Order New Purge Of Art

"Modernistic" Work To Be Confiscated

Berlin, Aug. 3 (INS)—Hundreds of German museums and private art collections on public display today were ordered purged of all modernistic canvases and sculptures.

Premier Goering promulgated an official decree enacting into law the recent interdict of Chancellor Hitler against lewd, decadent and indecent art forms such as he was shocked to see displayed at the Munich art festival.

On that occasion, the Fuehrer, a former house painter and one time dabbler in water colors and oils, bitterly castigated such modernistic trends in art as cubism, post-impressionism, surrealism and so-called "dadaism."

Goering's decree ordered the purge be carried out relentlessly, regardless of whose private property might be affected. His proclamation empowered the ministry of education to enter all public art displays and museums and remove or confiscate all offensive objects.

The premier reserved the right to decide what disposal shall be made of confiscated works.

Goering also ordered the ministry of education, Dr. Bernhard Rust, to warn public officials and state employes convicted in any way with art to discourage any trend toward the type of work denounced by Hitler.

Detroit Installs New Archbishop

Detroit, Aug. 3 (AP)—The Most Rev. Archbishop Mooney was installed today as archbishop of the newly-created diocese of Detroit.

More than half the archbishops and bishops of the Catholic hierarchy in North America, many of them from Canada, were gathered in the Church of the Blessed Sacrament when the Most Rev. Amelio Giovanni Cicognani, D. D., apostolic delegate to the United States, placed in the right hand of the archbishop the golden crozier symbolic of episcopal authority over 600,000 Catholics.

Brent Still Insists He'll Cut Bridal Tie

Los Angeles, Aug. 3 (AP)—Film star George Brent said today he would press his suit for annulment of his marriage to Constance Worth, actress.

Miss Worth said "nothing could come between her and Brent," who seeks to dissolve the marriage on grounds they failed to comply with Mexican law in a ceremony at Tia Juana.

London, Aug. 3 (AP) — King George VI flew from Windsor Castle to Southwold, Suffolk, today in the royal family's new red and blue monoplane for his first flight since he became king last December. The 115-mile flight was made in 35 minutes.

PROBE Race Track 'GIFTS'

U. S. TAX MEN ACT SECRETLY

A federal investigation into alleged "gifts" made by operators of dog and horse race tracks in Massachusetts to state politicians has been started, the Boston Evening American learned today.

This new development was learned following the secret arrival here of five additional special Federal agents of the internal revenue department who will aid the nine men who have been going over the accounts and records of contracting firms.

George A. Lambert, special agent from Washington, who was directing the nine men in their probe of disbursements of a "political complexion" of various contracting firms, summoned the additional force to Boston.

Only then was it learned that the investigation would extend into probing the books of the horse and dog tracks.

GIFTS FOR 'SERVICES'

A Federal official, who did not wish his identity revealed, explained that the operators of the tracks would be asked to explain to whom large amounts were reputedly paid under the title of "services."

The recipients would then be questioned to determine whether the money was declared in their income tax returns.

At the Federal building, officials interested in the probe hinted that a Federal grand jury probe was inevitable, but because the investigation is expected to be so widespread it would not occur until perhaps early next month.

United States Attorney Francis J. W. Ford was reluctant to discuss either the contracting or horse and dog track cases before the hearing in connection with the M. McDonough Company, Saugus contractors, comes up in federal court August 10.

UNCOVER AGREEMENTS

A special federal grand jury investigation also loomed today into collusive bidding by which Massachusetts contractors are accused of having mulcted the federal government of huge sums of PWA contracts.

Discovery of the agreements by which a powerful group of contractors practically controlled and almost completely apportioned the millions of dollars in PWA contracts has been made by federal agents investigating accounts of business men and politicians in search for income tax evasions here, it was learned today.

SECRET MEETINGS

Examination of several Greater Boston contractors behind closed doors in a Boston hotel brought to light the unsuspected manipulation of PWA contracts, it was learned. By arrangements made at secret meetings called as frequently as large WPA projects were announced, the powerful group of contractors was able to keep most of the better paying jobs within their selective circle, it is charged, with the government having no choice to escape the high demands without rejecting the low bids.

The federal investigating force here—known as the "wrecking crew" because of its record in smashing graft in political machines—is preparing a voluminous report of the swindle in anticipation of the grand jury session.

SAVED AFTER FALL INTO SEA

Seaman Battles Gales in Fight for Lifeline

Chester Gates, carpenter aboard the steamer Exochorda, was back at his duties in port here today after his thrilling rescue from the ocean 17 miles out of Boston when he fell overboard while opening a port door for the pilot ship.

While scores of passengers lined the decks, Gates swam in the open sea, harried by swarms of gulls following the ship. When the vessel was finally put about and returned to the swimmer, a life line was thrown to the carpeter.

The wash of the ship's propeller kept pushing the life line beyond Gates' reach and it was only after 20 minutes of constant swimming that he was pulled to safety.

The hammer he had been using to open the port door was still in his hand when he reached the deck.

The Exochorda had a passenger list of 96, of whom 16 landed here. Mrs. Racha Kalaf of Souk-el-Garb, Syria, arrived to be met by her daughter, Mrs. Natja Owen of Gardner, whom she had not seen in 15 years.

The Brighter Side

By DAMON RUNYON

Copyright, 1937, by King Features Syndicate, Inc., International, copyright and all other rights reserved. Distributed by Universal Service.

In Powhatan, Ohio, according to a press dispatch, the town marshal bends bad boys over a barrel and administers liberal portions of what we used to call strap oil to that part of the anatomy which, in such a posture, is calculated to be the most prominent.

Damon Runyon

The punitive performance is public, and is said to be highly favored by many of the 2500 inhabitants of Powhatan. They claim it is keeping juvenile delinquency down in their town.

Even the mayor and a minister of the gospel of Powhatan are quoted as saying they think it is all right. We take it the mayor and the minister have never been over a barrel.

RULE OF THE STRAP

In our opinion, the merit of the marshal's system, if any, can scarcely be fully determined until the Powhatan generation that is being raised under strap rule has aged a little. If the current youth of Powhatan all grow up to be fine, honest, kindly men, who would not think of doing anything wrong, then we must assume that the marshal's larrupings are just the thing.

But, if the generation produces the usual run, in any generation, of wife-beaters, flinty-hearted landlords, swindlers, defaulters, and bank robbers, it will be an argument against the strap. We will have to defer judgment about ten years, and we advise the youth of Powhatan to wear, in the meantime, shock absorbers in their breeches.

ONE WAY TO DO IT

In some places strapping would perhaps legally be deemed assault, and in general it is likely to be viewed with great distaste. It is not considered wise, humane, or fashionable, to give junior a belting with a strap nowadays, or even with an elm club. The civilized way to do, when you catch junior out of line, as we understand it, is to sit down with him and reason things out with him in gentle Christian spirit.

You explain everything to him in quiet, manly fashion. You appeal to junior's finer instincts. You leave junior greatly chastened by the interview and thereafter wholly indisposed to delinquency. That is if the thing works out the way it is supposed to, and you are the type that can address yourself to junior for more than two minutes, hand-running, without yelling like a maniac.

Of course, if junior is one of those innately ornery little devils, who listens to you in deep contention, and then, as soon as your back is turned, goes out and tries to set fire to a church, more drastic measures are permissable. It is then proper to adopt a severe, looky-here-you-young-fellow tone of voice with him.

MOTHERS' FEELINGS

But, under no circumstances must you reach for a strap, club, blackjack, or other instrument of that nature. Corporal punishment of juvenile delinquents is pretty much out of date in this country, except in Powhatan, Ohio.

It has been abandoned largely, we think, out of consideration for the feelings of mothers. They do not like to see junior smacked around by the male parent.

It is a curious thing about mothers, that they wear out hair brushes by the gross on junior in his infancy, and almost break their knuckles popping him on the head and around the ears as he grows older.

But, when he finally reaches a stage where a little masculine mauling might be in order, mother starts squawking, the distant father takes a good grip on junior.

AVOIDS ARGUMENT

So, father has gone in to sparing the rod, not out of any humane feeling in the matter, but to avoid arguments around the house. Anyway, another modern idea is for father to make a little pal of junior, to which idea we attribute the production of an unusually large number of precocious young fatheads, who are pretty fresh to their elders, and more highly imitative of pal father's faults than his virtues.

We do not say this is true in every case. But it has been our observation that the juniors who are a trifle scary of father are more inclined to respect him than the junior that father lugs around with him as his little pal, to cast a shadow of restraint upon father's more mature associates.

"LITTLE PALS"

We are almost committed to the Powhatan barrel when we think of some of the father's little pals we have encountered.

that my husband Maurice Raymond Smith, experienced before he reached this country, although he was born here.

My husband, who is a sailor now, attached to the navy yard in Charlestown, was born 28 years ago at Lincoln, Neb.

FATE AGAINST HIM

When he was six months old his mother took him to visit her parents at Lochbridland, near Shankill, County Down, Ireland. But shortly after their arrival there his mother died.

The infant was cared for by his grandparents while his father, a fire department employe in Lincoln, Neb., was making plans to have the youngster returned to the United States.

But in the meantime my husband's father died and, of course, what efforts were being made in Lincoln to have the child brought home were postponed.

He was, however, being brought up by his maternal grandmother, Mrs. Elizabeth Hanna, of Lochbridland, who soon sent him to school when he reached the proper age.

Finally, when the grandmother died, his uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Timothy Moloney of Lincoln, Neb., made efforts to adopt him. But fate was against this move.

Instead of being taken over the 5400 miles of ocean that would have landed him at Boston or New York, as part of his trip to Nebraska, my husband, then a boy of only 14, was taken to Sydney, Australia, by an uncle, who went there to seek his fortune.

GETS JOB AT 14

But at Sydney he ran away from home, got a job, first in an iron foundry and then herding sheep on one of the broad Australian ranches. He was 16 but big for his age.

My husband, however, was still a "boy without a country." He yearned for the United States. His young head could not devise means to realize the desires of his heart. He knew he had been born in Nebraska, but that didn't help him much.

Meanwhile, his aunt and uncle in Nebraska, located my husband at Melbourne, Australia, through the United States Consul-General Norman L. Anderson.

It took exactly five years for the Moloneys to prove that Maurice was born in the United States.

Finally came the data for my husband's sailing for this country!

But objections to his travelling alone arose when it became known that he was so young. His own pleading, however, and the fact that he looked older than his years caused authorities to stretch a point and he was allowed to embark.

ON FOREIGN SOIL

It was agreed between my husband and his uncle and aunt that he would land at Seattle and the Moloneys planned to meet him there. But by some quirk in the series of incidents that appeared like obstacles, the vessel put in at Vancouver, British Columbia.

Once more he was back on foreign soil after a 9000 mile trip.

But finally by means of his passport he was admitted to the United States. And one day he arrived, tired, but happy, at the home of his aunt and uncle in Lincoln. That was in 1925.

Four years ago I was visiting friends at Long Beach, Cal. I was given the trip as a birthday present. At a party in California I met my husband. We were married not long after.

My husband is now stationed at the Boston navy yard following a "tour of duty in Spain."

My husband was attached to the ship which went into Spanish waters to aid in removing Spanish refugees from the war area to neutral places. He had assisted first in the transfer of a group of United States cadets from the cutter Cayuga to the U. S. Battleship Arkansas.

The scenes of desolation and sorrow, of Spanish families being separated and not knowing when, if ever, they would be reunited again, brought to my mind the strange experience of my own husband.

He came near losing his American heritage.

'Sea-Going Auto' Costs Lynn Man Fine of $75

Ernest F. Brigham of Light street, Lynn, was fined $75 in Lynn district court today on a charge of driving while under the influence of liquor, after a car alleged to be his was found under water at Lynn beach. He did not appeal.

The car was found half submerged by a girl swimmer on July 27 at 1 a. m. She told Metropolitan Police Officer Joseph Reinhardt she found no one inside after swimming out to the automobile.

Later, Brigham was arrested while walking down Washington street, his clothes dripping wet, according to police. He said he had parked on the beach at low tide, not noticing the incoming water.

15 YEARS COMING TO AMERICA

TAMMANY HARMONY UP TO NEW LEADER

New York, Aug. 3—Tammany leaders today looked toward Christopher D. Sullivan, 67-year-old Congressman, to restore harmony within their ranks following his election as chief of historic Tammany Hall.

The political boss of New York's famed Bowery, a Sphinx-like veteran whose only public speech on record is "Thank you" was named in a 15-minute election to succeed James J. Dooling.

All the fight among Tammany's bitterly split factions melted into nothingness when the vote was taken. For a week there were predictions of increasing tumult in the Wigwam over the mayoralty candidacy—Senator Royal S. Copeland, A few stalwarts even whispered that the end of the battle would be the end of Tammany Hall.

So the unanimous selection of Sullivan for leader was regarded more as a victory for harmony and former Governor "Al" Smith than a triumph by local anti-New Dealers over New Dealers, as the contest had shaped up earlier.

"Al" Smith, on the day Dooling's body was buried in Calvary cemetery, led a Tammany "harmony march" in favor of a party boss election today, the solid backing of the Tiger for Senator Copeland in the coming mayoralty race to oust Mayor LaGuardia from City Hall, and disposal of Grover A. Whalen as Copeland opposition.

When told of Sullivan's election, Senator Copeland in Washington described the Bowery boss' ascent to Tammany's throne as "wonderful."

NANKING MOVES TO DECLARE OPEN WAR

Tokyo, Aug. 3 (INS)—A declaration breaking off diplomatic relations with Japan has been drafted by the Central Chinese legislative council at Nanking, a Japanese dispatch from Shanghai said today.

The decree—preliminary to a declaration of war—will be promulgated as soon as it receives the approval of the central political council at Nanking, the account said.

While the Japanese government took emergency measures to raise a Chinese war chest of more than $125,000,000, newspaper and semi-official dispatches from the Asiatic continent indicated that hundreds of thousands of Chinese troops are steadily enveloping the Peiping-Tientsin area from the provinces of Chahar, Southern Hopeh, Shansi and Shantung.

Winchester Girl and Family Safe in China

While efforts were being made through President Roosevelt to obtain the release of Lieutenant Rodney M. Powell, U. S. N. R., his wife, a former Winchester girl, and their two small children, reported imprisoned by Japanese forces in China, a dispatch from Shanghai today stated that they were safe.

The dispatch quoted Japanese authorities as saying that Powell and his family were living at the Wagon Lits Hotel in Peiping. Uncertainty as to his whereabouts previously had started the earlier report.

Japanese Pursue Chinese in Retreat

By the Associated Press

The Sino-Japanese war crisis developed on several fronts yesterday.

Japanese infantry, pressing southward from Tientsin, came close to the line of northward moving Central Chinese government troops at Tehchow, on the border of Hopeh and Shantung provinces to the south. Japanese war planes bombed a vanguard of the advancing Chinese armies. The Japanese march, however, was almost unopposed.

It followed the Tientsin-Pukow railroad, about 70 miles south of Tientsin, the same route the Central Chinese government forces were said to be taking north. The head of the Chinese column was reported to have reached southern Hopeh province.

Chinese reported another Japanese column marching behind a screen of aerial bombers moved toward Paotingfu, Hopeh province capital southwest of Peiping.

On another front, the newspaper Izvestia, official organ of the Soviet government, charged Japan with "trying to provoke a conflict with the U. S. S. R. by any means."

CHINESE TERROR TOLD BY HUB MISSIONARY

Barricaded behind mission walls in the Chinese war zone, the Rev. Harry S. Martin, 60, of Boston, American missionary at Tungchow, today informed the American Board of Missions he survived last week's disastrous battle there, 12 miles east of Peiping.

Safe with him is the Rev. James A. Hunter, of Peoria, Ill., wired Martin.

The missionary graphically described harrowing experiences of the clash between Chinese and Japanese, just outside the North China capital following the uprising of Chinese soldiers of the East Hopeh regime.

Both Martin, a graduate of Hanover Theological Seminary, and Hunter, are attached to the American Mission School conducted by the Congregational Church.

"We plan to remain in Tungchow unless we are forced to leave," Martin wired the mission board.

In chronological succession, he listed highlights of the armed uprising.

"Thursday—Harrowing experience. Gendarmes besieged Japanese camp. We heard all Japanese killed. I am afraid they spared neither women nor children.

"Thursday p. m.—Planes came and bombed city for two hours. The complete results are unknown, but explosives are likely taking ghastly toll in the crowded areas.

"After frightful slaughter, Japanese numbering 10 women and six men came to us and we aided them."

In the afternoon the Japanese launched a counter bombardment, Wrote Martin.

"Ten thousand terrified Chinese came to us, and we quieted and consoled them as best possible, advising them to scatter to the country and avoid concentration.

"Friday — Another two-hour Japanese bombardment occurred both within the city and the surrounding areas in which the gendarmes were scattered. The city's populace is terrified and fearful the Japanese will wreak vengeance on them for the gendarmes' acts."

STATE F. OF L. FIGHTS WALSH HOUSING MOVE

By JOHN W. ENGLISH
Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent.

Lowell, Aug. 3—Delegates to the State Federation of Labor convention today went on record as opposing U. S. Senator Walsh's demand that federal housing project apartments be limited to those with incomes no more than three times the rentals.

The convention voted this unanimously after the reading of a telegram from National President William Green. Green called Senator Walsh's amendment "dangerous" and urged passage of a resolution called for enactment of the housing bill intact.

As the bill reads now, tenantry is limited to families whose total incomes are not more than five times the amount of the rent charges. The housing bill is at present in the U. S. Senate awaiting a vote.

MESSAGE HITS AT CIO

Just a few minutes before the housing telegram was received, Green had sent another, extending his greetings to the Massachusetts federation delegates and asking the Committee for Industrial Organization to task—by inference.

"We will resist every attempt made by subversive forces to impose upon the organized labor movement in America an imported philosophy designed to substitute dictatorship and autocracy in America for democratic rule, individual and collective freedom," it said.

Both messages from Green were received with great applause and action was taken immediately on Green's request that telegrams be sent to Senator Walsh and a resolution be drawn up opposing Walsh's housing bill amendment.

JAPANESE PRODUCTS HIT

Resolutions were introduced calling for condemnation of national and state proposals to force incorporation of unions and protesting against importation into the U. S. of cheaply-manufactured Japanese products that are deceptively labeled.

A measure was then brought to the convention which would support President Roosevelt in his proposed reorganization of the Supreme Court and other courts and praising him for his "courageous stand."

All resolutions went to the resolutions committee and will be reported to the convention on Thursday. Most of them are expected to pass unanimously, but a hard contest was seen when the court measure comes up.

MORIARTY GETS OVATION

Massachusetts Commissioner of Labor and Industries James T. Moriarty was given a tremendous ovation when he appeared to address the gathering. He is a former president of the state federation.

"This is the greatest load you have ever carried," said Moriarty, referring to the matters before this convention. "The eyes of the labor world and the economic world are upon you and your responsibility is greater than ever before.

"Other labor conventions throughout the country will be greatly influenced by the stands that this body takes in its meeting here."

PRAISES HURLEY

Moriarty praised former Governor Curley highly for the co-operation he gave labor during his administration. Governor Hurley, he said, had gone one step further in his labor program.

"Governor Hurley has instructed heads of all departments in the State House to give every aid to furtherance of the program of labor," he declared. "That cooperation has counted. We have been able to halt strikes that would have left more than 75,000 persons out of jobs and would have lost millions of dollars."

In his telegram on the housing bill, National President Green declared that if the Walsh amendment were to be incorporated into the national act it would, in effect, force a tenant to pay one-third of his income for rent.

"Actually, the worker cannot afford more than one-fifth for this," the telegram said. "He should not have to pay more than one-seventh, as European experience shows."

Senator Walsh had proposed his amendment on the ground that the housing bill would provide apartments for persons in fairly comfortable circumstance to the exclusion of those who are practically poverty-stricken.

John J. Driscoll of Boston, member of the Federal Housing Administration, urged that the convention express itself in favor of municipal tax exemption of housing projects. He argued that this would aid in establishing low rental charges.

NOT AGONY—MUSIC!

Don't be fooled by this seemingly agonized expression on the features of 12-year-old Charlie Winn of Roxbury. He's whistling, not suffering! And whether it's the way he holds his face or not, he's the whistling champion of all Boston playgrounds. He won the title today in Vine street auditorium, against a field of close competitors.

NO HIGH COURT BERTH TO FILL, SAYS BORAH

Washington, Aug. 3 (AP)—Senator Borah (R.) of Idaho told the Senate today there was no vacancy in the Supreme Court for President Roosevelt to fill.

Borah, recognized as one of the Senate's leading constitutional authorities, took the floor at the outset of today's session to continue yesterday's debate on the subject of when the President should fill the vacancy in the court caused by the retirement of Justice Willis Van Devanter.

SUPPOSED VACANCY

Attorney-General Cummings had ruled the President could make a recess appointment, and need not nominate a justice before Congress adjourns.

Referring to a vacancy as a "supposed vacancy," the Idaho senator said:

"I want to invite the Senate's attention to the fact that in my opinion there is no vacancy. I do not think there is any vacancy to fill and I wish to urge that for the consideration of the Senate.

"It will become an acute question when the President sends in an appointment."

ONLY 3 WAYS OUT

Borah said he would not be "greatly surprised" if Attorney General Cummings "had this in view" when he advised President Roosevelt he could delay the nomination until Congress adjourns.

"There are only three ways a justice can be separated from the court," Borah continued, "by impeachment, by resignation, or by death. There is no ther way."

WIN RIGHT TO WED

HOUSE DELAYS WAGE BILL ON REQUEST

Washington, Aug. 3 (U8)—Action on the Black wage-hour bill was temporarily delayed by the House labor committe today at the request of President Roosevelt.

The delay was sought in an effort to avert a threatened split between House and Senate and to meet objections of William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, to the Senate bill.

The labor committe after a brief sessions, and over the objections of several members, voted to adjourn until tomorrow.

COMPROMISE SOUGHT

Meanwhile, administrative legislative experts, representatives of labor and the congressional committee will seek to work out a compromise bill.

The request for delay was carried to the House committee by Green himself, after the White House was unsuccessful in an effort to reach Chairman Mary T. Norton (D.), of New Jersey, by telephone last night. Mrs. Norton was en route to Washington for the meeting.

Green disclosed in conference with members of the House committee that he feared the Black bill, as passed by the Senate, would permit the wage-hour board to deal heavy blows at collective bargaining, by fixing minimum wages and maximum hours in industry different from those agreed upon by organized labor with some employers.

CIO—AFL BATTLE

There were indications that the battle between the A. F. of L. and the CIO had entered into the wage-hour controversy.

"The real truth of the matter," said a liberal member of the committee, "is that the A. F. of L. and the CIO are trying to get the advantage of each other."

Mrs. Norton said that she hopes the committee can fram a bill for House action next week, but added that she is not sure of this.

Washington, Aug. 2 (AP)—Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia of New York told the House banking committee today that housing was a problem requiring federal attention, if people are not to be "compelled to live in insanitary, cheerless, dangerous hovels."

As president of the United States Conference of Mayors, LaGuardia endorsed the Wagner-Steagall housing bill at the House hearing shortly before the Senate resumed floor consideration of the measure. The bill would permit federal loans and grants to private, semi-public and public housing agencies low lost housing construction.

A $26,000,000 appropriation would start the program, which would be continued with $700,000 raised by a bond issue.

The mayor said private enterprise was able to construct proper housing for low-income families. He said structures by private builders entirely covered the lots and grade to private, semi-public and public housing agencies low lost housing construction.

Washington, Aug. 3 (INS)—The Jones sugar bill, which has caused a bitter dispute between three cabinet officers and the congressional "sugar bloc," will be called up in the House for debate on Thursday, Chairman O'Connor (D.) New York, of the rules committee predicted today.

The issue—restrictions on refining of sugar in Hawaii and Puerto Rico—thus would be fought out on the floor of both House and Senate.

Secretary of Interior Ickes, Secretary of State Hull and Secretary of Agriculture Wallace all have declared opposition to the bill, if it retains the restrictions against the island possessions. A presidential veto has been hinted for such a measure.

The House agriculture committee is standing pat on the bill, but Chairman Jones (D.), of Texas, was authorized to say that he would introduce a new bill without the objectionable features in order to win consent of House leaders to bring the measure into the House.

Leaders of the "Sugar Bloc" were confident the House would vote overwhelmingly against the stand of the cabinet officers.

2 Whistling Boys Win City Honors

Dulcet strains of tropical melodies, though slightly nasal, wafted out over Vine and Dudley streets in Roxbury today as 12-year-old Junior Winn of 16 Dewey street won the Boston park department whistling contest.

"Blue Hawaii" was Junior's prize-winning madrigal.

Fitzpatrick represented Murray Park, while Winn was the Winthrop playground entry. More than 500 heard the final contests at the Vine street auditorium.

Druggist Webster Inquest Witness

Providence Aug. 3 (AP)—Horace Simmonds, Edgewood druggist, testified today at the inquest into the murder of Dr. George W. Webster, who was wounded fatally July 16 in his home.

Dr. Webster spent five hours in Simmonds' pharmacy the night before he was murdered. Simmonds was the only witness at today's session of the inquest being conducted by Coroner Conrad K. Strauss.

NAMES 5 TRUCK LAW PROBERS

Members named on the commission are Timothy O'Neil, Lawrence; Samuel Derby, East Walpole; John F. Curran, Milford; Ralph H. Lahouret, Boston, and Ed. Doyle, assistant freight traffic manager of the New Haven Railroad.

Other members of the commission already appointed by the president of the Senate and speaker of the House are Senator Norland H. Holmes of Weymouth, Representatives William A. James of Barnstable, Walter H. Hayden of Taunton and Bernard P. Casey of Boston.

RAIL UNION VOTE FAVORS STRIKE

Washington, Aug. 3 (INS)—The executives of the fourteen cooperating railway labor organizations, representing approximately 800,000 railway workers, after canvassing the strike ballot authorized a month ago, announced today that 88 per cent of the employes involved had voted in favor of a strike, in the event a satisfactory settlement cannot be reached.

The workers are demanding an increase of 20 cents an hour. Railroad managers have announced they are unable to offer more than 4 cents an hour increase.

Mediation is still in progress, but no satisfactory basis of settlement has been developed.

Employes Share in Nahant Will

Salem, Aug. 3—Fifteen legacies to relatives and three to former employes, totaling $67,00 in cash, are provided for in the will of the late Mrs. Mary Edith Forsaith of Nahant, filed for probate today.

Two sisters, a brother and niece, in addition to bequests of $10,000 each, share in the valuable antique furnishings of the Forsaith home. The sisters and brothers also share the real estate and residue of the estate.

The sisters are Miss Grace I. Norris of Bow street, Woburn, and Mrs. Sarah N. Exley of Hawthorne street, Malden. Daniel Norris of Amherst, N. H., is the brother and Miss M. Edith Cowles of Bow street, Woburn, the favored niece.

Three other nieces receive legacies of $1000, $2000 and $5000, respectively. Three nephews will get $1000 each. A brother-in-law and his wife get $10,000.

Mrs. Eleanor Tidemand, housekeeper, will receive $3000, and Mrs. Norah Glynn McGrath and Miss Nellie P. Manning, employes, $50 each.

$1,325,170 Value On Morgan Home

New York, Aug. 3 (AP)—J. P. Morgan's Glen Cove, Long Island, estate was given a 1937-38 assessment valuation of $1,325,170 in tax records compiled today by Commissioner Lynn B. Hammond.

Grain Collectors to Feel Red Lash

Moscow Aug. 3 (AP)—Although the grain harvest is reaching record proportions, an unnamed number of workers will be tried and severely punished for irregular wheat collections, Pravda, official Communist party organ, reported today.

Charged with mixing Uprainian, Crimean, and other types of wheat, those singled out for punishment will serve as a warning to other workers in the collection service, the paper stated.

Home Made Racer Kills N. H. Maker

Westmoreland, N. H., Aug. 3 (AP)—A home made automobile racer brought death today to its maker, Frank McCoy, 29.

McCoy died in a local hospital several hours after his machine, being tested on a back road, shot over a stone wall and struck a tree. Passing motorists found the wreckage and the victim.

Millions in Gems Stolen in Paris

Paris, Aug. 3 (INS)—A jewel theft possibly running into the millions was disclosed today with publication of an advertisement offering $10,000 reward for arrest of thieves and return of the gems.

The theft occurred at a fashionable hotel on the Champs Elysees, July 2. One report said the victim was the wife of an Indian potentate.

Hunt Pickpocket

Paris Essay Winners Welcomed in New York

Greater Boston Pair Sail Tomorrow On Normandie

New York, Aug. 3—This city today welcomed the two winners of the Boston American-Sunday Advertiser and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer "Free Trip to Paris" winners as they completed the first leg of their journey.

Arriving in Gotham aboard the Eastern Steamship Boston, Miss Helen Jean Coleman, of St. John street, Jamaica Plain, and John J. Moran, of Marlboro, were met at the North River pier by officials of the American-Advertiser and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

From there they and friends were immediately taken uptown to a hotel where they will make headquarters until the French liner Normandie sails for Europe tomorrow evening.

Accompanying the winners to New York were George J. Moran, father of Moran, and Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Coleman, parents of the Coleman girl.

Before the S. S. Boston left its berth in Boston last night, scores of the winners' friends were at the dock to wish them bon voyage.

Joining two other winners from Norfolk, Vt., they will be the guests of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer until they board the Normandie. The essay winners will spend 15 days in Paris returning the latter part of August aboard the Normandie.

"Full speed ahead, we're Paris bound." Here are Miss Helen Jean Coleman, Jamaica Plain, and John J. Moran, Marlboro, lucky winners in the Paris essay contest recently conducted by the Boston Evening American, Sunday Advertiser and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, as they sailed from Boston for New York last night. Today they are being feted in Gotham and tomorrow night will sail on the S.S. Normandie for 15 thrilling days in Paris, their reward as winners in the contest.

Ex-Grid Star Held in Auto Death of Bridegroom

New Orleans, Aug. 3 (AP)—A young man hooked as William Bragg, Jr., 22-year-old former Holy Cross-New Orleans College football player, was held today in the hit-and-run death of Waldron J. Bowers, struck down five hours after his marriage.

Police Sergeant Patrick O'Brien said Bragg surrendered yesterday shortly after the funeral of the young bridegroom, who was killed when he stepped from a street car with his bride early Sunday.

"I just couldn't stand it any longer," Sergeant O'Brien quoted Bragg as saying. "I haven't been able to eat a thing since I read in the papers that the man died. I don't know what happened; I didn't see him at all. I just felt a bump and knew I had hit something. Then I lost my head and drove off."

Bragg was charged with involuntary homicide and fleeing the scene of an accident.

Soviet Health Chief Ousted in Purge

Moscow, Aug. 3 (AP)—The replacement of Gregory Kaminsky as commissar of health added another name today to the list of Soviet leaders caught in governmental shakeups.

Kaminsky's removal became generally known yesterday, when M. F. Boldyreff was named his successor by the Council of the People's Commissaries.

The appointment was made without official comment, but the newspaper Krasnaya Gazeta of Leningrad recently reported "Trotskyist wreckers" were active in public health institutions.

The newspaper cited as an example bad smallpox vaccine which it said had been sent from Leningrad to Tadjik Republic and then back to Leningrad, where it caused the death of one child and illness of 25 others.

Economy League Fights Wage Bill

Members of the National Economy League today were urged to write to their Congressmen in protest against the hours-and-wages act passed by the Senate, which the League said holds out inducement of higher wages to WPA workers in addition to "short hours and easy work."

"Due to this added inducement we should not be surprise to see people flocking from private business to the WPA," the League declared.

'SPUN GLASS' LATEST

Becoming, indeed, to Miss Priscilla Kelly of Watertown is the "spun glass" negligee she's wearing at the Hotel Statler, where the second annual Boston Ladies-Ready-to-Wear Market Week is in progress, with hundreds of Boston-made gowns, lingerie and costume accessories on exhibition.

150,000 Exhibits 'Made in Boston' at Garment Show

Novelty spun glass negligee shown in a recent film success, featured the second annual Boston Ladies' Ready-to-Wear Market Week, sponsored by the Wholesale Garment Association, which opened today in the Hotel Statler and will continue through tomorrow and Thursday.

Manuel Kaufman, chairman of the convention, reported 150 exhibitors, twice as many as last year, were in attendance. All merchandise shown is made in Boston.

The exhibit is located on the fourth and fifth floors of the hotel and it is expected more than 2200 buyers will scan the 150,000 items on display before the sessions end.

The displays include dresses of all types, cloth and fur coats, underwear, knit wear, sports wear and skirts and ski wear. Buyers from all over the world have come to view the new items.

The highlight of the show will be the dinner and fashion review tomorrow night at 7 o'clock in the Hotel grand ballroom.

Mysteriously Hurt Man Is Identified

The mystery man found lying unconscious on the sidewalk of Merrimac street, West End, last night, and treated at Haymarket Relief Hospital for a severe head injury, was identified today as Allen Luoma, 48, Main street, Maynard.

Luoma, still on the danger list, regained consciousness today only long enough to reveal his identity.

STEEL Industry ACTIVE

OPERATIONS STEPPED UP

New York, Aug. 3 (AP)—Such diverse influences as good domestic crops and rising demand for steel by arming nations have helped the steel industry to accelerate to the fastest summer rate in peace time.

This week steel mills will step operations up to 85.5 per cent of capacity from 84.3 per cent last week, the American Iron and Steel Institute estimated. Last year at this time the industry was running at 71.4 per cent of capacity.

This year, according to estimates of the Department of Agriculture, farmers will have more cash in pocket than in any year since 1929.

What this means to steel companies in terms of business is illustrated in some measure by reports from various Federal Reserve districts last week.

From Minneapolis came reports on the ninth Federal Reserve District indicated increases in order for farm tractors in six states were running from 15 to 100 per cent ahead of last year.

From the 11th district, Dallas observers reported machine shops working at a brisk clip. Kansas City, meanwhile reported a record harvest.

On the basis of these and other reports steel makers predict more steel will find its way into farm implements this year than ever before.

Superimposed on the demand for steel from farm equipment producers and other manufacturers is buying for the account of foreign nations in the rearmaments race.

This contest got a sharp boost December when Great Britain announced intention to spend some $7,500,000,000 in throwing up her defenses.

The recent outbreak of hostilities between China and Japan, it is argued, will further quicken the pace of steel demand.

On the other hand potential buying from the Far East could be choked off by application of the neutrality act which calls for a cash-and-carry sales policy on exports to belligerent nations. This would go into effect should the President proclaim that a state of war exists between the two countries.

Aircraft, Parts Sales Increase

Sales of American aircraft, aircraft engines and spare parts totaled $49,450,114 for first six months of this year, up 53.3 per cent from like period last year when sales were $32,215,341. The figures were made public by President Rogers of the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce of America, Inc.

In six months of 1937, 1041 commercial airplanes were delivered. Their total value was $9,989,083, up 81 per cent from that of 653 commercial planes delivered a year before. Military planes delivered in the period numbered 264 valued at $12,462,564, up 49 per cent.

Commercial engine deliveries were 2083 valued at $7,797,398, a value increase of 85 per cent, and military engines were valued at $7,075,309, a decrease of 2% per cent, though the number combined with 827 from 1936. Aircraft and engine spare parts sales totalled $12,126,118, against $6,879,754.

June was an all time record high aeronautical deliveries amounting to $9,314,402, against $6,597,895 in June, 1936, an increase of 41.7 per cent.

United Aircraft's Profit Jumps

United Aircraft Corp, East Hartford, Ct., a holding company for transport and manufacturing operations, reported net profit for the quarter ended June 30 of $989,203 after charges equal to 39 cents a share compared with $197,608 or 8 cents a share in the June quarter of 1936.

For the six months net income was $1,688,055 or 67 cents a share compared with $348,360 or 24 cents a share in the first half of 1936.

Air Transport Traffic Gains

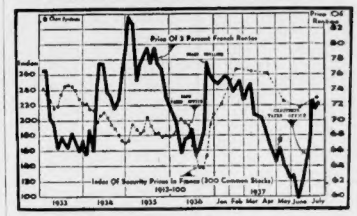
The 20 scheduled air lines operating in the United States in June carried 110,842 passengers, flew 5,811,404 miles and 47,290,279 passenger miles, according to the bureau of air commerce, department of commerce.

This compares with 97,453 passengers carried in June, 1936, 5,619,896 miles flown and 40,252,557 passenger miles flown.

Bank Discount Rate Reduced

Paris, Aug. 3 (INS)—The bank discount rate today was reduced to four per cent from five, where it has stood since the recent financial crisis.

French Stocks Recover



Following the fall of the Blum government in France, late in June, the cabinet of M. Chautemps took over the reins. Apparently this latest government has been able to inspire a larger degree of confidence from French security markets than did the preceding cabinet in its closing months in office.

Indicative of the trend of French government bonds, the 3 per cent rentes toward the end of July were back to the levels of March. Since June, common stock prices in France have also moved upward. It is significant to note that a similar rise in security values took place shortly after Blum took office in 1936.

Predicts Record High Copper Consumption

New York, Aug. 3 (AP)—Use of copper and its alloys this year will set new record highs in the automobile and many other consuming industries, Bertram H. Caddle, secretary of the Copper & Brass Research Association predicted today.

Consumption of brass pipe and copper tubing by industry as a whole last year mounted to the record total of 94,000,000 pounds, and on the basis of seven months' results 1937 sales will exceed 100,000,000 pounds, he said.

The automobile industry last year, he added, used approximately 250,000,000 pounds of copper and its alloys, and thus far this year production is running 12 per cent ahead of 1936, despite strikes, indicating use of copper by auto makers may ring up a new yearly record.

Use of copper, brass and bronze by the air-conditioning industry is expected to aggregate 25,000,000 pounds in 1937, or double the record consumption of 12,000,000 pounds last year, he said. New record use of copper tubing by the oil burner industry is also expected with consumption of the red metal topping a year ago in the electrical mechanical refrigeration, radio and other manufacturing fields.

July Best Month So Far

By LESLIE GOULD
International News Service Financial Writer

New York, Aug. 3—For the holder of stocks July was the best month so far this year. Of 27 groups tabulated in this department, none registered a loss on the month.

The group gains ranged from 24.1 per cent in the public utilities down to a bare gain of 0.1 per cent for the sugars. And of the 106 individual stocks making up these groups, only five finished below their closing levels of the month before. Two of these were in the sugars, two in the mines and one in the rubbers.

The feature has been the elevation of the public utilities and the tractions from their cellar positions into first and second place, respectively. The tractions for five months in a row held the number one position from the beginning, while utilities from January through June were lower and often not far from last place.

As far as the tractions are concerned the change is due more to the working of the law of averages rather than any basic change in the picture. Higher wages, higher material costs, higher taxes, the latter from the city subway and the fixed five-cent fare are increasing rather than lessening problems.

UTILITY FATE

The public utilities received a little encouragement from the shelving of the Supreme Court packing program. The fate of this industry, more than any other, is wrapped up in the courts.

The motor accessories, motors and steels, in that order, made the next best showing, with the first showing a market appreciation of 15.7 per cent, the second 15.4 per cent and the steels 13.1 per cent.

The poorest record was made by the sugars, with the rubbers, mining and food groups just a little higher up the scale. The rails and communications also were behind the general market.

The following table compares the percentage gain in market values of the 27 groups with their showing the month before:

GLAD He's U.S. CITIZEN

MUCH TO BE THANKFUL FOR

By B. C. FORBES

My favorite waiter remarked to me at lunch:

"I had a letter today from my brother in Galicia. He says that nobody there knows when a big burst-up will come, but that he is afraid to say very much about conditions lest his letter be opened by the authorities and this would be sure to get him into trouble. He does tell that soldiers are everywhere and that it is hard for the rest of the people to support them. Galicia, you know, was formerly a part of Austria, but since the World War is largely a part of Poland."

He added that sometimes he thought his lot and the lot of his own family here were far from ideal but that when he reflected on what his family would be enjoying in Europe, he realized that he had much to be thankful for. "At least," he concluded, "we get enough food here and a comfortable, if only a small place, to live in. I can tell from my brothers that they are not nearly as well off. They aren't always able to buy decent food or enough of it. My parents are in the same fix."

That conversation set me thinking about conditions in various foreign lands where militarism and dictatorships dominate.

Consider what has been happening in Russia. Reports after reports tells of wholesale death sentences, immediately followed by firing squads. Other evidences indicate all too convincingly that discontent is rife and that this discontent springs from intolerable political, economic, living conditions.

In short, the conclusion is inescapable that Russia is in a bad way and that it is a poor country for ordinary folks to live in.

How many Americans would care to live in Italy, where individual freedom has given way to totalitarianism, meaning that the individual and his rights have been totally sacrificed and that the state is sublimely supreme? Freedom of speech, freedom of the press, freedom of the individual has been drastically curtailed. Truth-telling foreign journalists are expelled. Jews are persecuted. Hating Mussolini and his regime are admitted to the country.

Germany, from infancy, every boy has a uniform fastened on him and he is taught that his whole training will be spent in preparation for becoming cannon fodder.

How much better are conditions under Hitler? Nazism is supreme in Germany. Freedom has been annihilated.

What of the future of nations under the iron heels of dictators?

Russia's finances have been helped out by her extraordinary strides she has made in producing gold, gold which, thanks to Santa Claus Uncle Sam, she can sell here at $35 an ounce, contrasted with $20.67 before the advent of the New Deal. Even Russia's international financial conditions are generally regarded as precarious. Her industrial system has been almost completely stripped of her gold. She has been unable for years to meet her foreign obligations. "There are no large fortunes left in Germany," one highly responsible German told me the other day.

Italy has put up a bold front. But her financial straits are such that she has ceased revealing the facts.

In the face of the foregoing, are the American people likely to endorse additional political moves in this country to push us farther along the pathway towards dictatorship?

Happily symptoms have been developing for some time that public opinion here favors a return towards genuine Americanism.

Our historic political system, our historic economic system, our historic industrial system, in common with everything human, have been, still are and will continue to be, faulty. But which nation on the face of the earth has evolved anything more conducive to the welfare of ordinary folks and families?

Betty Alden on 'Beacon Hill'

By BETTY ALDEN

YOU MIGHT EXPECT statesmen and a great many North Shore socialites to attend the wedding of Jean Sears, sister-in-law of Senator Henry Cabot Lodge . . . but, quite to the contrary, Jean chose a very quiet affair, with only the immediate family present, for her marriage to Archibald S. Alexander this afternoon at 3 o'clock . . .

MRS. ALEXANDER COCHRANE

The wedding took place at the summer residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry S. Sears, at Beverly, with Bishop Philip M. Rhinelander tieing the knot . . .

Jean wore a simple wedding gown of white organza trimmed with lace and clouded with a filmy tulle veil which falls from a cap of lace . . . There were no wedding attendants and after receiving the best wishes of the small company at the wedding the bridal couple left for their honeymoon . . . They will live in Bernardsville, New Jersey, the state where the Alexander family cuts a great deal of ice, both socially and politically . . .

The bride, who is a member of the Chilton Club, was educated in Paris where her family resided for a number of years . . . Her sister, Emily Sears, is the wife of Senator Henry Cabot Lodge . . . and her brother, Henry, was recently married to Mrs. Mary F. Smithers of Greenwich, Ct. . . .

Mr. Alexander, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Archibald Alexander, graduated from Princeton in 1928 after preparing at St. Paul's School in Concord, N. H. . . . He also studied at Harvard Law School. In 1929 he married Susan Dimock Tilton, who died a few years later . . . He has a small son and daughter . . .

Cochrane-Grew Ceremony

EVEN THOUGH JEAN SEARS had a very small wedding, the North Shore social colony was not being deprived of the opportunity to dress up today in its most gala summer attire to attend a fashionable wedding . . . for Eugenie Grew became the bride of Alexander Cochrane at high noon in St. John's Church, Beverly Farms . . .

In order to have her wedding ceremony in keeping with the smallness of the church Eugenie chose only three attendants . . . but from the standpoint of guests the wedding included most of the prominent residents along the shore . . . The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Randolph C. Grew of Marlborough street and Manchester, and Mr. Cochrane's parents are Mr. and Mrs. F. Douglas Cochrane of Commonwealth avenue and Northeast Harbor, Me. . . .

The bride wore a gown of ivory satin and lace, with a three foot train and billowy tulle veil trailing gracefully behind her as she walked down the aisle with her father . . . A coronet of orange blossoms around her hair held her veil in place and some of the same fragrant blossoms tuft the hem of her skirt into graceful folds . . . Butterfly orchids and lilies of the valley were combined in her bouquet . . .

Eunnelle Cochrane, sister of the bridegroom, wore a gown of shell pink organza made with a full skirt and pleated fischu, and a large pink horsehair hat . . . Her outfit differed from the bridesmaids only in the delphinium sash and trimming on her hat . . . Ann Pemberton and Esther Binney, the bridesmaids, were dressed in all pink outfits and carried old fashioned bouquets of pink and white and blue larkspur arranged in delicate lace paper doilies . . .

At the reception at the Essex County Club Mrs. Grew assisted in receiving, gowned in a Molyneux model of beige with a large brown hat and corsage of green orchids . . . Mrs. Cochrane chose a brown chiffon gown and hat and a corsage of white gardenias . . . Richard Stackpole of Beacon street was best man . . .

Following their honeymoon, the couple will be in Manchester for the rest of the summer and then will reside in Boston . . . The bride attended Beaver Country Day and Foxcroft Schools . . . Mr. Cochrane attended Groton School and the University of Vermont . . . His clubs include the Tennis and Racquet, Union Boat and Exchange Club . . . He is a nephew of Mrs. George R. Fearing, Mrs. F. Murray Forbes, Mrs. Lindsley Lorong and Mrs. James Denison Sawyer . . .

Helen Ellis of Wellesley to Wed

WEDDING PREPARATIONS are becoming second nature to Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Howard Baker of Wellesley, for Mrs. Baker's three daughters are embarking upon matrimonial careers this summer . . . Her eldest daughter, Dorothy Ellis, became the bride in June of William Cusumano of Waban . . . Helen Preston Ellis will be married August 21 to Dr. Lewis Thorne of New York . . . and Elizabeth, the youngest of the girls, has chosen September 25, her mother's wedding anniversary, as the date for her wedding . . . The girls are daughters of the late Reuben Morris Ellis of Waban . . . .

Mrs. Cusumano and Elizabeth will precede Helen down the aisle of the Church of the Good Shepherd in Waban when she becomes the bride of Dr. Thorne the afternoon of the 21st . . . The ceremony will be attended by the families and a few intimate friends, but additional friends have been invited to greet the bridal couple at the wedding reception at Brae Burn Country Club . . .

Miss Ellis has chosen four out-of-town friends to be her bridesmaids . . . the Misses Emeline Thorne, sister of the bridegroom; Helen Marie Daeve of Ridgeway, N. J., Mary Craft of Walling, Pa., and Winifred Wadbrook of New York . . .

Dr. Thorne, who is the son of Mr. Samuel Thorne of Rye, N. Y., and The Uplands, Keene Valley, N. Y., will be attended by his father as best man . . . his five brothers, Ward C., Arthur, Peter B., James N., and Samuel Thorne, Jr., will be among the large corps of ushers . . . Seymour Ellis, brother of the bride-to-be, will also be an usher . . .

Miss Ellis is a graduate of Bradford Junior College where she specialized in music, and in June she received a degree from the Presbyterian Hospital of the Columbia Medical Center in New York . . .

Dr. Thorne graduated from Groton School in 1927, from Yale University in 1932, and from the Yale Medical School four years later . . . He and his bride will live in Baltimore where they will be at home at 513 North Wolfe street after September 1 . . .

PLAYTIME For North Shore Debutantes

DOROTHY POTTER, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert S. Potter of Manchester, gets a kick out of a game of ring toss now and then as a little diversion from the more rugged sports of tennis, sailing and swimming which are so popular with the young crowd on the North Shore. Miss Potter will make her debut at a dance in Manchester on October 2.

Luncheon at O'Malleys' Home in North Cohasset

Only six weeks of summer remains for blithe-hearted collegians before class-room walls, early morning lectures and campus regulations close in.

Manhattanville rah-rah sounded the keynote for the luncheon Grace Genevieve and Mari-Celeste O'Malley gave yesterday at Grey Ledges, their Jerusalem road home in North Cohasset.

Dorothy Heide of New York, a Manhattanville classmate who is the house guest of Eileen Hynes of Chelsea, a fellow collegian, was honor guest. Grouped about the luncheon table were Rosalie Moore and her guest, Helen Franklin, Betty Murray and Edna Dooley.

ATTEND PREMIERE

Last evening, practically the entire luncheon group were on hand to acclaim that grand personality of the theater, Mrs. Patrick Campbell, who did "The Thirteenth Chair," current offering at Alexander Dean's South Shore playhouse.

The O'Malley looked very fetching indeed, attired alike in tailored men's coats of old blue tweed edged with plaid worsted braid, even their hats were identical, a little affair but open in idea.

Rosalie Moore of Kansas City, who came East to serve in Mr. Loughlin O'Malley bridal, attended last evening's performance with her mother, Mrs. Genevieve Moore, who has leased a summer home at Plymouth. Rosalie chose an informal sport frock of turquoise and Helen Franklin, her attractive blonde house guest from Honolulu, wore blue shantung with a Peter Pan collar of white.

TO WELCOME NEWLYWEDS

The entire O'Malley family will go to New York to welcome home the newlyweds, Mr. and Mrs. McLoughlin when they disembark from their British Isles honeymoon Friday.

Another collegian who attended last night's performance and who is likewise intent on jamming a heap of fun into the remaining summer days was Billy Taylor, Jr., of Cohasset, who came with his mother, Mrs. William T. Taylor, for another recent successful bridge and tea at her Cohasset home, wrote history for the Guild of St. Elizabeth. Mrs. Taylor's colorful chiffon was topped by a mauve coat. Billy's leaving for Newport today to take in the remaining cup races.

Needlework

Candlewood Barn on Heartbreak road in Ipswich will be the scene of sale of needlework and handiwork from the Women's Educational and Industrial Union Thursday and Friday. Mrs. Samuel Cabot is chairman of the needlework committee and Mrs. Harold G. Cutler is chairman of handiwork committee. Tea will be served at 4 o'clock on both afternoons.

Members of the Union's North Shore committees include Mrs. Frederick S. Moseley of Newburyport, Mrs. Roger B. Warner of Ipswich, Mrs. Frank P. Ahern of Swampscott, Miss Louise Condit of Bass Rocks and Mrs. J. Templeman Coolidge of Portsmouth.

All Weight Problems

WRITE in enclosing a self-addressed stamped envelope for my Weight Chart. Beauty is not merely skin deep. Without health there can be no beauty—that is why diets and exercise play such important roles in today's scheme of things.

Dr. William Howard Hay, one of the most famous dietary experts in the world, declares that it isn't the quantity nor the richness of the foods we eat that adds to our weight so much as the wrong combinations we indulge in.

My Weight Chart will determine the correct measurements for your height and age. Find out just how you stand, then let's get busy and do something. If it is a dietary regime that is needed, write and let me help you on the best diet.

Are you under weight? We have just the right balance-gaining diet for you. Hostilities wrong? That can easily be helped. An undeveloped bustline is usually due to poor posture; while the overdeveloped bust may be corrected with exercise and a homemade or commercial lotion that I can recommend. Let the Weight Chart be your guard in determining what is wrong. That's the first call. Be sure to enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Absorb Rays Of Sun Wisely

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

THIS IS the time of the year when everyone is interested in sun baths and can get them without cost. Everybody is eager to obtain a protective coat of tan. The well-tanned individual appears healthy, robust and full of pep.

In addition to his healthy look, he actually feels well, and is better able to enjoy his work. The sunshine develops qualities which permit him to fight off infections at this time of the year.

The health value of sunshine cannot be overstated. Everyone should obtain as much of it as possible, at every time of the year. Storage of the helpful effects of the rays of the sun in the body will help you carry on during the fall and winter months. The wise person considers the future.

The possibilities of the summer months in the way of restoring health and strength are well known. At this season of the year it is possible to indulge in fresh air and exercise, a privilege which is denied many of us during the winter months.

But be careful! It is well to bear in mind that excessive amounts of sunshine are harmful. Particularly it is wise to avoid sudden and undue exposure to the rays of the sun. Many severe and often serious burns result from such exposure. Destruction of the protective layer of the skin may take place from severe burning.

Picks Bridal Attendants

The Very Reverend Philemon Sturges, dean of the Cathedral Church of St. Paul, will officiate at the nuptials Saturday afternoon of Gladys Candler Hinckley to Arnold Porter, in the Church of St. Peters-by-the-Sea at Narragansett, R. I.

The bride-to-be is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank L. Hinckley of Providence, and Mr. Porter is the son of Dr. Emery M. Porter and Mrs. Mary B. Porter of Washington.

Mrs. Charles F. Hovey of Marblehead (Anita Hinckley) will be one of her sister's bridesmaids as will Elizabeth Hinckley, Miss Sophie Maurian, Mrs. John Blakey, Mrs. Jesse Sammis, Mrs. William Laurie, Mrs. Denver Evans, Miss Susan Kennedy, Miss Esther Blodgett, Miss Eleanor H. Darling, Miss Lucy Ann Schneider and Miss Nancy Krementz. Mrs. Robert S. King, Jr. (Francesca Hinckley), the bride's twin sister, who was married in June, will be the matron of honor.

Dr. Porter will be best man for his son. Miss Maurian is giving a dinner party tomorrow evening at the Dunes Club in Narragansett in honor of the bridal couple.

Program at Paine Home

Mrs. John Adams Paine is opening her Duxbury home at 10:30 o'clock Thursday, for the second in the series of four Midsummer Mornings which are being held in South Shore towns for the benefit of the Young Women's Christian Association camp scholarship fund.

Gladys Hasty Carroll, author, will read from her latest novel, "Neighbour to the Sky," and Charles Lee will discuss other recent fiction.

Mrs. Hector McI. Holmes heads the committee and working with her are Mrs. Paine, Mrs. Roswell Parish and Mrs. Horace H. Soule.

The Wedding Bells Chime, But 'Doubting Thomas' Doesn't Hear Them

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Here's a young man who is going to be married any day now. Yet, strange as it may seem to you, he hasn't the slightest idea about it.

That is why he writes me and implores that I tell him what to do.

Postponing comment until you read his letter, I give it to you. Here it is:

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Two years ago, when I came home from my Easter vacation, I fell in love with a girl at first sight.

We corresponded regularly, and when I returned to my home town we had a few dates. Thinking she did not really like me, I didn't see her for some months.

She asked what was the matter. We made up, and last Christmas became engaged.

When I asked her to set the date for our marriage, she told me to wait till my debts were cleared up. One night I saw her out with another man. She said there was nothing between them. I told her to stop talking to him, and that started the fireworks. Soon after this she broke the engagement.

Now she sees this man once a week. She also says he's a drunkard.

I hear now that she hopes I won't find another girl. I have written her many letters, but no answer. I would do anything in the world to get her back.

Please tell me I'm silly for caring so much.

B. H. WALTHAM.

MY DEAR SON:

Don't be a "Doubting Thomas." Have some backbone. Go out and tell the young woman that you love her and that you intend to make her your wife. Girls admire men with courage. In fact, they admire it a lot more than they do good looks.

If you do this, I'm sure you will write me in a day or two, telling me that you and the girl are reconciled, and that the wedding bells will be ringing in full volume for you and for her.

It's always like that, my boy, when a girl says she hopes you won't find another sweetheart.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I'm very much in love with a boy who likes a girl friend of mine.

She doesn't care for him in the least, but goes with him for something to do. I've been told you disapprove of "running after boys."

This boy is very friendly to me, but that is all.

Other girls go places and have good times, while I stay home, as my girl friend takes the only boy I care about. UNHAPPY.

DEAR CHILD:

If you can't go places with the boy you want, because he is monopolized by a girl who takes him as a convenient escort, please stop sitting at home moping and go out with some other boy.

It's highly probable that, as you youngsters all belong to the same crowd, you will meet the boy you like, and he may switch partners.

I've just had a letter from a high school girl who is in the same boat you are, which is why I quote from it. Her best friend has practically kidnapped the man she likes, yet she thinks it would not be honorable to try to get him back.

Time marches on, and you high school youngsters had better take advantage of your youth and go in for good clean fun, instead of walking 'round on stilts in this fashion. Don't be you is engaged; you are free to go where you please.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

Madge Learns of Leslie's Letters

CHAPTER 370

"I think we'll talk in your room," Dicky whispered as we came to the top of the stairs after leaving Jim to his vigil. "We're less likely to be overheard there."

I nodded, for the position of my room makes it more desirable for confidential conversation than his, and when I had locked the door behind us, and turned up the lamp, Dickey drew me down to a chaise lounge beside him.

"I'm not going to make this a long confab," he said in a low voice, "for I'm dead tired, and I know you must be. But there is a surprising thing you simply must know. At that, you wouldn't need to know it until morning, but by that time you'd be dead of curiosity, and I have no desire to wear black on my coat sleeve as yet."

"Don't tell me if you're too tired," I offered.

"All right, darling," he grinned. "I appreciate your heroic offer, but I shan't accept it just now. So just unpin your ears while I shan't tell you of what I found out at the jail house."

VERY UNPOPULAR

"I got quite a line on the capering cockroach," my husband began, giving to Jack Leslie the contemptuous appellation which he had long ago applied to him, and which always has seemed peculiarly fitting. "He certainly isn't a popular guy even at our leading crime emporium, either with the inmates or the guards."

"Take an 'A' in Personal Psychology II," my husband said with a professional air which he forthwith abandoned for his former colloquial one. "He is just that kind of boob, and he isn't disobeying any rules, or laying himself liable to punishment. But he's an artist in making himself as disagreeable as possible without doing anything on which they can lay a finger. But I fancy there are several men over there, guards and prisoners, whose feet are aching to give the capering cockroach a swift kick. Oh, I got a lovely line on him, and everything he's been doing in the way of letter writing and such.

"If there's anybody from the president down to whom Leslie hasn't sent at least a letter, that's who handles the mail over there would like to know who it is," he said. "He's the most voluminous letter writer they've ever had there."

"Does he get any replies?" I asked.

"That's the funny thing," he answered. "Nary an ear while I have any knowledge of it, and he hasn't drawn so much as a picture postal card."

"Of course, there hasn't been time for him to get back many replies," I commented.

"What about this accomplice—or—associate—of his?" I queried, "the one who's trying to bribe Dicky Tiger to tell him where Mary is?"

He paused and looked down at one oddly.

"Prepare yourself for a shock, old dear," he said. "I got a list of the names to whom Leslie has sent letters, and whose name do you suppose heads all the rest?"

"Tell me quickly," I commanded, seizing his coat lapels impatiently.

"Philip Veritzen, Esquire," he said.

Bridge

Holdup Necessary

That a Bridge "holdup" is often necessary is illustrated by today's hand.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 NT	Pass	2 NT	Pass
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

The bidding is typical of modern notrump tactics. South's opening bid shows a hand containing from 4 to 5 honor-tricks, with at least three cards in each suit. North's raise shows approximately a trick and a half and invites South to bid game with any values above a minimum. Since South has 4½ honor-tricks and all suits stopped, he properly goes to game.

West opens the Jack of spades, and East properly plays the King. South should beware of taking this trick.

A count of the tricks available should inform South that the contract cannot be made unless both of the minor suits are developed. If East has both minor suit Aces, the contract probably cannot be lost if West has both minor suit Aces, the contract cannot be made unless the spades split 4-3.

If the Aces are split as is more probable, only care is needed to insure the making of the contract.

THE PROPER PLAY

By refusing to win the first spade, East can win the second spade trick and attack either minor suit in perfect safety. If he happens to knock out South's Ace first, East will have no spade at that point and cannot remove South's last spade stopper.

If South wins the first spade, he can make his contract only by guessing which Ace West has. If he happens to start the clubs before the diamonds, West can win and knock out the spade stopper, but can never thereafter regain the lead. But if South should happen to attack diamonds first, East will win and return his last spade.

The suit will then be established for West, and he cannot be prevented from gaining the lead with his Ace of clubs to run his spades, and defeat the contract.

Bobby Breen Fed Up With Vacation

By HARRIET PARSONS

Copyright, 1937, by Universal Service.

Los Angeles, Aug. 3—When a kid voluntarily gives up a vacation—that's news. Mr. Robert Breen (Bobby to you) has told his boss, Sol Lesser, that he'd like to start another picture immediately.

Bobby is now vacationing at a summer camp for boys, but maintains that he has more fun when he's working — and even more kids to play with. Looks like Bobby, who just finished "Make A Wish," will realize yet another wish. On account of Lesser has four writers going to finish his next vehicle. Vicki Baum is working on an original titled "Schermann's Wharf." Gertrude Berg, radio script writer who authored "Make A Wish," the current Breen starrer, is preparing stories of New York. Earle Snell is whipping up a Hill Billy number called "Goodbye Yesterday," and Rose Franklin, sentimental playwright, is here adapting his original story, "Lucky Star."

Harriet Parsons

And speaking of the younger generation, we thought Bobby frequently lost our perspective. Jane Withers, for example, isn't considered a "big name" in our village. Yet, reliable box-office checkups reveal that she ranks ahead of Bobby and Shirley Temple as Marlene Dietrich.

Sol Wurtzel, fully aware of Jane's drawing power, has just purchased "Checkers," one of the biggest money making rans track ever entered in the history of the American theater, for Jane's next Twenty-Cent-Fox vehicle. Rank and file of the fans will be watching the Henry M. Blossom stage play of yesteryear. And Jane is now at Santa Anita track between scenes for "Al Palmer," in preparation for her role as the jockey in "Checkers."

Jack Warner and Hal Wallis are considered the only two men who approved Mervyn LeRoy's decision not to make any more biographies. "My Country First," the story of Harr Salomon, staunch patriot and astute advisor to George Washington, is being considered by the heads of Warner Brothers one more picture and Jack and Hal feel that this colorful story of early days with spies will be an ideal vehicle for him. Whether Muni feels the same way remains to be seen.

After six years of portraying "The Typical American Girl" for M-G-M, Eleanor Powell feels she can really act when given an opportunity, has obtained her release. Her first picture, which will be with Jack Madge, like many of our outstanding players, plans to free lance. Incidentally, Miss Powell's first picture a year deal which she'll doubtless accept, and other studies are presenting similar deals.

Line o' Two: My first apology since taking over this column (well, my first in print) goes to Darryl Zanuck because of an erroneous report that Don Ameche and Loretta Young and Tyrone Power vs. M-G-M for "Raze of Paris." Darryl states emphatically that he has no intention of loaning out Twenty-Cent-Fox's two biggest box office assets, and of offering Ameche as "Second Davenport" as soon as both finish current assignments in the home lot.

Howard Estabrook, associate producer at Paramount, has been rejected for another year. Estabrook, formerly a writer, is now supervising "Wells Fargo," one of the heavies budgeted outputs on Para's schedule for this year. Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Lubitsch and Boris Morros, Para's music boss, is now scouting Europe for a new girl to play the singing cigarette maker . . .

What Has Happened!

It was bad enough when Toni Goddard's father became bankrupt, but when her fiance, the socially prominent Brock Milbank, eloped with Jessica Payne, it was almost more than she could bear. However, the homely philosophy of an old fisherman gives Toni hope. He compared life to a fisherman's net which, though torn, is mended and put to sea again, adding: "There's healing in work!" So Toni goes to New York in search of work. Weeks pass and she finds none. Then one day, Bridget, an old apple vendor, suggests that Toni try for the chorus of the New Gallic Casino, telling her to ask for Cassie. Toni flies to Cassie that the latter's mother, in Cincinnati, sent her. She gets the job. The night before she is to go on, she watches the performance. A dark handsome man, sitting nearby, stares at her. Toni repulses the advances of "Fatty" Gusheim, her director. She now lives with Cassie. One evening she meets her room-mate's boy friend, Herman, whom she recognizes as the man who sold her a fox neckpiece and then substituted a disreputable looking cat fur for it.

Now Continue:

CHAPTER EIGHT

At the conclusion of the song came a burst of applause. A slim, sallow-looking man, who seemed as though he had been poured into his evening clothes, so perfectly they fitted, clapped loudest, from his table in the restaurant.

"Bis Bis! Encore!" he exclaimed. Toni had a quick conference with the pianist.. Then she went into the exquisite strains of "Parlez Moi d'Amour."

A curious, hungry sort of look was on Fatty Gusheim's face as she returned to the table. Thank Heaven the ordeal was over! And by the applause—it was even now ringing out—surely she had acquitted herself favorably?

"Nice voice and nice delivery," said Fatty. He added, suddenly tripping her hand under the table: "Let's get out of here, and go up to my place." He beckoned the waiter and paid the check.

"Please, no. I'm terribly tired. I'll go right home," said Toni outside, signaling a passing taxi and holding her hand out to the director.

"I'll be at the Casino at noon tomorrow, for the audition. And thank you a thousand times for giving me this chance!"

Fatty ignored her hand. He mumbled something that sounded like: "So you'd turn me down, huh?"

"Tomorrow at noon," repeated Toni, her face in a set smile. She got into the taxi, giving the address of Cassie's apartment. The cab swung round, and off.

WAS HE ANGRY?

Was Fatty annoyed with her? —she wondered. But she'd handled the situation beautifully, to her own mind. He knew now that her voice was good. That was the one thing that truly counted.

Arrived at the tiny apartment that had been her home for the past three weeks, she heard a man's voice, and Cassie's gay laugh.

Cassie cried:

"That you, Toni? Say, I've a surprise for you! Who d'you think walked in on me? None other than the boy friend! Meet Herman!"

Toni stood rooted to the spot as Herman rose, took a step forward, stared at her.

"Why—you! You here?" Her voice was angry, incredulous, shocked! It was the man who, this afternoon, had taken her ten dollars and palmed off the old catskin on her!

Toni awoke at 11 o'clock the next morning to the loud ringing of the alarm clock.

This was the all-important day of the audition. But merely a matter of form now, she having acquitted herself so excellently in Dave's Blue Room the night before!

She turned off the alarm, not wanting to wake Cassie in the other bed. But, glancing over she saw there was no Cassie.

And if Cassie had gone out, she hadn't made her morning coffee. More likely she'd "done the town" with Herman. And how had the night ended? Toni was worried about Cassie.

Ought she, on her return last night, to have denounced Herman, then and there?—she wondered. Shown him up for what he was, to the girl who loved him, and who had been so kind to him?

She hadn't wanted to hurt Cassie.

But Cassie had seen their mutual shock at meeting. Had acted in a huffed, suspicious manner, thereafter. Toni had gone to bed, following Herman's brazen remark that she was confusing him with someone else. Cassie apparently had not swallowed that.

TOO PRUDISH?

She began to wonder if she had made a mistake in not yielding to his whim about going up to his apartment.

Often he gave parties. He was hospitable. Had she been overprudish in suspecting an ulterior motive?

She sent a prop boy for a sandwich and a glass of milk and continued to wait, hoping. Hours passed.

At half past six, it was time to snatch a light dinner and hurry back to the Casino. The director would explain what had happened. Something had prevented his coming for her audition.

She was sure of that.

Arrayed in a gorgeous gown and a huge hat swirled in ostrich feathers, Toni and the other showgirls drifted about the deck of the yacht in the first scene.

The principal sang as though she'd never heard of laryngitis!

A BAD BLUNDER

Calamity, for Toni, occurred toward the end of the scene. She was tripping down the gangplank, right in view of the audience, when the girl behind her, crowding her, pushed her suddenly, so that her heel caught in the planking. She fell to her knees, righted herself, but an "Ah!" went up from the diners.

The rhythm was broken, there was an awkwardness among the other girls, a loud laugh from someone in the audience. Then order and rhythm were restored.

His face was grim.

He didn't even give her time to ask about his failure in appearing for the audition. He said curtly: "Awkwardness has no place on the stage, nor have I room for an awkward showgirl. You'll get your salary from the doorkeeper. You're through."

NOT ONE TEAR

Nor was there any sympathy from Cassie when she reached the apartment at the end of the performance.

It was obvious that Herman had poisoned her against her new friend so as to cover up his trickster activities. Toni was "no good." She'd met Herman who gained off that old fur on you!" cried Cassie, indignant.

Toni told Herman only got back from Chicago late last night. He hasn't been in New York in a month. You are the liar! Didn't you trick me with that trumped-up fake of knowing my mother?

"It was I that got you your part in the show, and you repay me by getting in Dutch with the director!"

Toni went back to her former hotel, saddened but wiser.

High Style Story Told by New and Luxurious Furs

PETAL collar and sleeve bottom for femininity in letout Jap mink, notable also for raglan shoulders and full swagger, below left.

A SKUNK CAPE, bottom, with pelts treated like silver fox, can play triple costume role with tailored clothes, town coat, or for evening.

By ANNICE BRINK

EVEN IF YOU haven't it, the new fur coats will give you a lovely posture, keen and lithe.

And even with the bravery of straight shoulders, there's more utter femininity and softness without a trace of bulk than ever before!

There are bulky furs to wrap you up like a very slim babybunting . . . blue fox capes, skunk coats given the regal pelt treatment of fox, opossum jackets.

But the chief point that strikes home as more and more fur fashions parade by, is the insistence on a boxy silhouette with a soupcon of fullness, and a brand-new spare look about it.

Collars are all but a species extinct. Most are very small, and stand up stiffly to their full height. In that case they fold back from the face in front, like petals. If it's a two-inch collar it buttons squarely under the chin.

Among the high fashion favorites in the entirely collarless cape of long fur, or even an occasional coat.

Tuxedo and stole lines are good. Shoulders are either blocked, molded or folded to a nicety. But there is a scarcity of involved pleatings and other such doings in the shoulder region.

All lengths from short bolero down are seen. But some of our best stores are betting on the "shorter than long length." And so are we.

"Your Figure, Madame!"

By IDA JEAN KAIN

EVERY woman loses her figure between 30 and 40—unless she exercises.

The front line, when controlled by strong, hard muscles, is naturally flat. Rolls of fat on the tummy are a sign that the muscles have gone soft and lax. Your figure can never look really young again until you firm and flatten that front line.

Even with normal weight this line needs special disciplins, for our entire mode of living is counter to natural exercise. The tendency is to relax these muscles in sitting, standing and walking, and this tendency increases with fatigue. Make no mistake, when these important muscles lose tone, you lose your figure.

Corrective exercises are equally necessary in the underweight and the overweight program. If you take on weight easily, your only chance of keeping your figure is to maintain these muscles in good tone.

Fatty tissues seem to gravitate to this area—it is the first place you gain and the last place you lose weight. Only firm muscles can make you immune to fatty deposit. Even when you are trying to gain weight, you must guard this line, for an increase in food intake means extra calories to turn into fatty tissue.

You wouldn't suspect from the appearance of most figures that nature provided us with slenderizing muscular girdles. These muscles never wear out. They grow stronger with exercise, but they stretch in all directions if the muscles lose tone.

The exercises which put these movements into practice may be taken in several ways.

Lie flat on the back, knees flexed and feet flat on the floor, and try to touch the small of the back to the floor. This draws the stomach muscles up and in. Another exercise is to arch your back high in the air like an angry cat, while on the hands and knees. Hanging from a stretching bar is an excellent way to put these muscles on their best behavior, but too strenuous for the beginner.

It takes consistent effort to tone flabby muscles, and abdominal exercises must be regular—daily, or twice daily. Also, right along with your exercise program, you must improve your posture and stretch up to your full height as you stand and walk.

To keep your figure young, send for the "Waistline and Bellitnes" leaflet and practice these exercises daily. Write for the leaflet care of Ida Jean Kain and enclose a stamped and addressed envelope.

Gracious Manners

Bill's gracious "How do you do" attracted Dorothy the moment he was introduced. No awkward "Pleased to meet-cha" spoiled her first impression of him.

When he asked for a date, he said, "Let's go to a movie Saturday"; didn't embarrass her with "What are you doing Saturday?"

Calling for her in his car, he didn't honk, but rang her doorbell. As they strolled from parking space to theater, Bill took the curb side. He asked Dorothy where she'd rather sit, told the usher, and dropped behind, letting Dorothy precede him down the aisle behind the usher.

Dorothy's warm smile charmed Bill right from the start. When he suggested going to a movie, she said, "I'd be delighted." If she couldn't or didn't want to accept, she'd have said, "I'm sorry, but I've other plans."

When Bill called she was ready, didn't discourage lovely keep him waiting. She let him open the car door for her. While he bought the movie tickets, she stepped to one side, away from the ticket line. She slipped into the row first, saying "I'm sorry" to people in front of whom she passed.

At the end of the "date," Dorothy said, not, "Thank you," but "I had a lovely time, Bill."

Iced Drinks

Keep Juices On Hand

By MARTHA LEE

COOL, refreshing drinks can be produced at a moment's notice by the busiest homemaker.

Long, cooling drinks in tall glasses seem to be the only thing desired on hot August days.

If basic syrups are prepared and stored ahead of time, along with fruit juices to mix with them, in the automatic refrigerator, the making of these refreshing drinks is quite simple.

We suggest keeping at least three such syrup bases on hand this hot weather. They can be used to make any number of combinations and will keep for weeks in bottles or covered jars in the automatic refrigerator.

Most iced drinks are sweet, and syrups provide delicious flavorings for beverages. These give body and smoothness just as an egg mixture does to milk drinks.

Remember also that the automatic refrigerator offers a quick and economical method of decorating cold fruit drinks and punches with garnished ice cubes.

Put into each compartment of the refrigerator tray a green cherry, bit of lemon, or a mint leaf for the pineapple or mint drinks. These cubes are much more attractive than plain ice.

The syrups kept on hand in your refrigerator may be used to sweeten the fruit drinks made from this same powdered fruit bases. Use a combination of one or more of the syrups in conjunction with the amount of powder called for in the instructions on the packet.

Three recipes are given for tasty syrups that may be stored in the automatic refrigerator.

PINEAPPLE SYRUP

1 can crushed pineapple
1 tablespoon grated orange rind
12 whole cloves
2 tablespoons corn syrup
½ cup granulated sugar
1 cup water

Mix all ingredients in a saucepan. Stir over low heat until the sugar is dissolved, simmer for 15 minutes. Remove cloves, pour into a bottle or jar, cover and store in automatic refrigerator. Makes 3 cups of syrup.

MINT SYRUP

2 cups granulated sugar
1 cup water
2 tablespoons corn syrup
20 stalks fresh mint, crushed

Combine the sugar, water and corn syrup with fresh mint in a saucepan. Stir over heat until the sugar is dissolved, simmer for 15 minutes. Strain, pour into a bottle or jar; cover and store in automatic refrigerator. Makes 2 cups of syrup.

LEMON SYRUP

2 cups sugar
3 tablespoons grated lemon rind
1 cup water
2 tablespoons corn syrup

Mix sugar, water, corn syrup and grind in a saucepan. Stir over heat until the sugar is dissolved; simmer for 15 minutes. Strain; pour into bottle or jar; cover and store in automatic refrigerator. Makes 2 cups of syrup.

FRUIT JUICE PUNCH

1 tablespoon Lemon Syrup
1 tablespoon Mint Syrup
1 tablespoon Pineapple Syrup
1-3 cup orange juice
1-3 cup pineapple juice
1-3 cup ice water
Ice cubes

Mrs. Campbell's Wit Undimmed; In Cape Drama

By PEGGY DOYLE

Mrs. Patrick Campbell, nick-named "The First Mrs. Tanqueray" as far back as 1893 after her performance had made Arthur Pinero's "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray" the talk of London, has an excellent reason for that fine-fibered wit of hers.

It has been known to throw whole audiences into confusion—and, mind you, when she was on this side of the footlights, even as you and I, and when she was talking in a whisper.

On her own say-so, any and all of the internationally quoted remarks to which she admits authorship have sprung full-grown from the forehead of Stella Campbell and expressed exactly what I thought—at the moment.

MRS. PATRICK CAMPBELL

But as to that reason for them, Mrs. C. goes on to state.

"There is an old Italian saying, 'If you make yourself honey, the flies will eat you.'

TOO MANY "FLIES"

"I can name you a half-dozen potentially great actresses half my age who have let themselves be eaten up by 'flies.' They are through in the theater before they have half begun to taste of their fame, while I, at 72—I'll be 73 in a minute, in October, to be tiresomely statistical—am still carrying on."

She had pooh-poohed the sincerely expressed sentiment that if she deducted 20 years from her stated age the result would tie up with her appearance to a nicety.

"Why, I'm an old witch," she retorted, stormily. "I've given up all thought of keeping my figger. I eat what I please now. It is also my pleasure never, never, never to have another photograph of myself made."

"Nevertheless and notwithstanding, Mrs. C.," we insisted, "if we hadn't peeked in 'Who's Who' we'd still insist you were exaggerating. And so, for the benefit of those of us who'll be old ladies in no time if we don't watch out, how do you do it?"

There's one thing about Mrs. Patrick Campbell — she doesn't shilly-shally. Shaw and Mrs. Leslie Carter and Alexander Woicott and others who have now and again been on the receiving end of her priceless barbs will vouch for that.

DISLIKES INTERVIEWS

And so she came instantly to bat with the honey and flies classic.

"I've refused to let people eat me up. I've been charged many times with having a poisonous sense of humor. To that, I can only say that I have always made it a point of saying exactly what I mean. I have never let people wear me down. But, oh, my dear, must you interview me? How I detest being interviewed? What is there to say? Now, my dear, suppose we play turnabout and I interview you?

"How old are you, dear? Now, now, and here I broadcast my great age to the world.

"And are you married? Well, in love then? No, not now, you say. Never again? My dear, how right you are. Love is just an opportunity for another to hurt you."

How right you are, Mrs. Campbell. And since we are getting personal, how about that ageless vegetarian who wrote you those mad love-letters? Are you, or were you in love with George Bernard Shaw?

"No," and with absolute finality. "Nobody has ever asked me that in this country. I've often wondered why. But that very old man, I thought he was dead. Isn't he?"

SAID IT BEFORE

Not bad, Mrs. Campbell, but you used it before. Alexander Woicott, in his grand book, "While Rome Burns," tells of a tinder-box get-together in Katharine Cornell's dressing-room of Thida Bara, Mrs. Leslie Carter and Mrs. Campbell. It was during Miss Cornell's season in "Dishonored Lady."

"Ah, you famous critic," cried Mrs. Campbell at the sight of the rotund Woicott. "Tell me, who SHOULD have played 'Dishonored Lady?' To cover up the breathless pause, Mr. Woicott began a flurry of introductions. Naturally, the great Mrs. Campbell and the great Mrs. Carter were acquainted.

"Honored! Honored!" Mrs. Campbell boomed, and then without releasing the exasperated Mrs. Carter's reluctant hand, she confided in one of her whispers that can be heard around the block, "I thought she was dead."

Nothing daunted, however, Mr. Woicott invited Mrs. Campbell and her devoted friend, a snow-white toy pekingese poetically named Moonbeam, to dinner at his bachelor diggings overlooking New York's East river. His intimates know it as Wit's End.

MOONBEAM WRONG

It inspired Woicott to do a highly polished thumbnail sketch on this great lady of the theater, a sketch which in turn inspired her to wire her thanks "for your bewitching inaccuracies."

A light allusion to it yesterday brought a thoughtful expression to Mrs. Campbell's still handsome face.

"Ah, that Woicott, he was not worthy of Moonbeam."

A bit baffled, we mumbled something or other, to which Moonbeam's mistress murmured into Moonbeam's silky white coat:

"Moonbeam thought he was such a prima donna."

PROPAGANDISTS HIT IN BILL

Washington, Aug. 3 (US)—A bill requiring all foreign propagandists in the United States to register with the Secretary of State was passed by the House by unanimous vote.

The measure, sponsored by Representative McCormack (D) of Massachusetts, was sent to the Senate for further congressional action.

McCormack charged foreign powers with financing men and women in the United States to "foster unAmerican activities."

Such persons, under terms of the McCormack measure, would be required to supply the Secretary of State with information regarding their employers, wages, terms of contract and the objectives.

The bill was framed as the result of recommendations made by the special House committee established four years ago to investigate un-American activities. McCormack headed the committee.

The bill clearly specifies that dissemination of propaganda considered harmful to interests of the United States government is not banned.

It merely seeks to bring to light the names of persons and agencies engaged in propaganda work of all type.

Knopf's Son Heads Out For Fame

Disappearing Youth Off to 'Make Good'

Alfred A. Knopf, Jr., son of the New York publisher, missing from his job in a Norwood publishing plant for more than a week, is probably bound toward Hollywood and the movies, it was announced today by state police who have been searching for him.

The 19year-old Phillips-Exeter Academy graduate wrote John L. Ladd, general manager of the Plimpton Press, Norwood, a letter since his disappearance, declaring he is "off on my own and you will not hear from me until I make good."

The boy's father, who hurried here to aid in the search for his son, said Alfred had "literary leanings" and apparently was not satisfied with his job as apprentice in the composing room of the Norwood plant.

He was last seen boarding a Boston-bound train at the Norwood station.

DUCE TO JOIN PEACE PLANS

London, Aug. 3 (US)—Great Britain and Italy moved definitely closer together today when Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain received a cordial personal letter from Premier Mussolini in answer to his own plea for co-operation in the name of peace.

Mussolini's reply, delivered by Ambassador Dino Grandi, carried warm words of welcome to Chamberlain and expressed his willingness to collaborate in moves to renew and strengthen the bonds of Anglo-Italian friendship.

Both Chamberlain and Grandi expressed the hope and belief that the exchange of these friendly letters would usher in a new era of Anglo-Italian relations, sorely strained by the Italian conquest of Abyssinia and the Italian course in the Spanish civil war.

THIS IS LIFE

—By—

Robert E. Rogers

This is the annual sunburn column.

The incidence of my late July sunburn seems this year to connect up with certain interesting announcements in the public press. The fact that I did not begin to smoke and steam until so recently speaks of an admirable self restraint on my part. During the two really hot spells I still kept myself looking reasonably Aryan, not to say Caucasian. Of my own free will. Not because the Missus kept me under wraps.

ROBERT E. ROGERS

Only with the cooler weather of the past two weeks did I feel the need of combining my studies in Kenneth Roberts' two-volume edition of "Northwest Passage," with historical notes and appendix, with a slow but thorough grilling. Also, one day was cloudy, with the sun peering down slyly, which really does more execution in the long run.

For the moment I have come through unscathed but jittery. I have definitely lost my taste for being broiled alive like a lobster. (Although the chances are that most of the "live broils" advertised in restaurants are fakes—boiled first and then seared with a hot iron.)

Bette Davis' Illness Disturbing News

There is too much disturbing news in the press. Bette Davis sunstroke and sunburn follows an edict by more than one Hollywood studio forbidding movie actors and actresses more than a decent cafe-au-lait tan, not because it plays havoc with makeup and camera, as one might suppose, but because it plays the dickens with health.

Although Garbo's sun tan as revealed in her Camille was enough to make the stoutest director blench. Sun tan on a cocotte of the eighteen-sixties does rather upset verisimilitude.

Bette Davis' illness from the sun is apparently serious enough, and one cannot ignore those repeated whispers that the cause of Jean Harlow's tragic death was a bodily breakdown involving kidneys which could be ultimately traced back to a very serious case of sunburn a year or more ago. We all know about the effect upon the kidneys of really serious burns. That is the basic cause of such death.

Sun Tan Oversold To Sizzling Public

There seems to be a general feeling in the press that sun tan has been oversold. I cannot remember seeing so many articles by all sorts of people warning the public against over indulgence in sun.

Beauty specialists, physicians and public health authorities and just plain kibitzers like myself seem at last to have got it into their heads that sun has other qualities than beneficent ones. Too much sun can hurt and even kill.

The Greeks had a word for it. In their mythology Apollo was not only the god of healing but the god of pestilence. Viz.—Homer's Iliad, Book I.

"God of the silver bow, thy shafts employ, Avenge thy servant and the Greeks destroy."

Obviously what Calchas prayed for and the long-haired Achaians suffered from was nothing in the world but high-powered sunburn.

Only the other day a friend told me about a family who drove to the beach for a day, lay down on the sand and went to sleep. They slept for four hours and woke up feeling uncomfortable. They decided they had better go home.

Trio in Critical Condition From Burn

One, either father or brother, collapsed at once on the beach and had to be assisted to the car. The mother fainted on the way home. The daughter kept control until she drove into the yard at home, when she, too, fainted.

All three are in a serious condition from the dreadful combination of sunstroke and sunburn.

They tell me that no one ever completely recovers from a bad heat-stroke or sunstroke. It is likely to recur. As for plain ordinary sunburn, in extreme cases you might just as well have a stroke of apoplexy. The results seem to be much the same.

Unfortunately, the newspapers can never really catch up with a universal fad gone wrong. For the past few years sun tan has undoubtedly been overplayed. This viewing with alarm by people who ought to know about it will take time to reach the millions who have been sold on the idea that sun tan is altogether beneficent. We shall be hearing of tragic results for a long time to come.

RITA Johnson TO WED?

HER MOTHER DOUBTS IT

Rita Johnson, Worcester's gift to the movies, may be Hollywood's Cinderella girl—

And Broderick Crawford, up and coming young man of the movies and the latest feminine distraction, may be the champion kisser of the film capital—

But—

Reports of their impending marriage were greeted today with traditional New England calm by Mrs. William J. Johnson, Rita's mother, who refused to get fussed over a report in a Broadway news-paper column that she might be about to have a son-in-law.

DOESN'T BELIEVE IT

"If they're going to be married it's a long way off," averred Mrs. Johnson firmly in Worcester, "and I don't believe it. Rita hasn't said anything to me about it and I haven't noticed any indications that her eyes are turned in that direction. She thinks too much of her career.

"Rita knows Broderick the same as she does a lot of other young men.

"Besides," the mother added, "Rita has been in the papers so much that I don't pay any attention any more."

But despite her statement, the rumors persist from other sources that the 24-year-old blonde who once sold hot dogs at a roadside stand and dealt them off the "arm" as a waitress in a Worcester restaurant before she was catapulted to radio and movie fame is headed matrimonial for the arms of the young man who only a little more than a month ago won the long-distance kissing championship of Hollywood with 113 kisses.

SON OF ACTRESS

The son of Helen Broderick, the motion picture actress, young Crawford is climbing to movie fame himself and, in the process of getting experience in Hollywood as young men will one night at a party walked off with the all-time kissing record.

Interviewers besieged him to find out how it felt. He said:

"It was swell for the first 24 times, but after that, well—"

And then, as if to enrich the romantic reports concerning Rita, Mr. Crawford said:

"Ask me who I would rather kiss. Well—I'll name them—

Rush Rescue Boat To Ship Aground

In dense fog the Lynn-bound coaster Edward Peirce of the Mystic Steamship Company went hard aground off Monomy Point today less than a mile from the ledge that trapped the freighter Capilio last week.

The Peirce's distress calls were picked up by Chatham radio station and relayed to the Coast Guard. Immediately the cutter Algonquin was ordered out of Maine waters to the Cod-ers aid.

Meanwhile, surf boats put out from the Coast Guard stations at Chatham and Monomy Point under order of Boatswain's Mate George F. Halle to stand by until the Algonquin arrived.

Aboard the collier were 38 men.

Hold Saugus Youth For Jury in $3000

Accused of being "the elusive 'vacation robber'" who has looted numerous houses of Saugus residents away for the Summer, Russell Gurney 18 of Sapphire road was arraigned in Saugus district court today.

Judge Charles E. Flynn ordered him held in $3000 for the grand jury on charges of breaking and entering in the night and larceny.

Dorchester Man Amnesia Victim

Gordon Stone, 27 Kenwood street, Dorchester, reported missing from his home last night, was discovered in Bellevue Hospital, New York City today, a victim of amnesia.

Stone, employed by an East Milton insurance company, was last seen at noon yesterday. When he failed to appear for dinner last night, police were notified. An item on the state police teletype was responsible for his discovery by New York police.

POOR GIRL FEARS PEOPLE

Garbo Interviewed Here; Shy, 'Waxes' Eloquent

Here you see Greta Garbo displaying shyness, but eager to explain her fear of people to Ann Marsters, Boston Evening American star writer. She "tank she go home," but has no means of locomotion. For, you see, this particular Garbo is made of wax. But that makes her the more easily interviewed. And, anyway, she talks as much as the real Garbo. She is doing duty as a mannequin in the I. J. Fox fur salon here.

Star Eagerly 'Talks' To Ann Marsters At Fur Store

By ANN MARSTERS

At last I have interviewed Greta Garbo!

Practically all my life, it seems, I have wanted to interview Garbo, but practically all HER life she has remained unavailable.

In fact, I suspected that there was really no such person as Garbo, that she was just one of Hollywood's clever tricks concocted in the makeup department.

So I could hardly believe my eyes when I was actually there beside her, asking her questions and gazing at her exquisite profile.

OBLIVIOUS TO STARES

True she was made of wax from head to toe, but that, I think, made her all the easier to get along with. She sat in the fur salon at the I. J. Fox store and pretended not to mind that there were quite a few people around looking at her and admiring her. I knew that she had been fashioned by Katherine Stephens, the Hollywood sculptress, and that she plans to stay in Boston for quite a while modeling furs and gowns for Fox buyers, so there was no need to be shy, I told her.

During the first part of our interview she seemed a little annoyed. However, once you penetrate the shell of Garbo almost anything, you realize that she isn't annoyed—she's just shy. She said so herself—and you may draw your own conclusions from the following conversation:

I was: I Mr. Garbo?

GARBO: I am not very well, tank you.

Why not?

GARBO: I am so awe-fully frightened. It is all these people. They frighten me so. I would like to run away and hide.

SHE'S SO SHY

Why don't you?

GARBO: Ah, I cannot. I cannot let them know how I feel. I am an actress.

Why are you afraid of people?

GARBO: It is because I am shy. I am so awe-fully shy.

Why are you shy?

GARBO: I am so shy.

That explains everything then. You're just shy.

GARBO: Ah, yes. It is so good of you to understand.

I almost saw you once in Hollywood," I said, growing a little bolder.

GARBO: Really?

HOW SHE SLIPS OUT

Yes. It was at M-G-M studios and you were making "Madame Walewska." Work had stopped on the set for lunch hour and everyone was coming out of the stage door. Someone with me said that if we waited by the door we'd see YOU coming out. We did, and I saw you just as you [illegible] the paper. I stood [illegible] and [illegible] you. I wanted to [illegible] you, but I was afraid you would be frightened. You [illegible] through the ceiling.

GARBO: Ah, yes. That is the way I always leave the set. It is the only way I know how to escape the people—the frightening people.

Anyway, I am glad I know a man who has seen you. He's one of the hands of the publicity department. He's been there for years and has seen you many times.

GARBO: I do not know how that could be. He was exaggerating, perhaps.

LIGHT IN HER EYES

Well, he has an honest face.

GARBO: His eyes betrayed him, may-be.

My eyes are betraying me, too, I thought, looking at Garbo's cool profile which was turned away from me, and she kept turned toward me. She was very beautiful, I thought.

Her eyes remained mysterious and aloof, and she wouldn't look directly at me. She wouldn't smile, either. But I understood, of course, that it was only because she was so shy.

And yet, when I was leaving her, I turned to nod a second good-by, and she [illegible] her [illegible] with a [illegible] smile. But maybe it was only the way the light fell through her long lashes on the blue glass of [illegible] eyes.

Suicide Leaves $1 to Pay for Gas

"I'm no piker. Here's a dollar for gas, and it's cheap at that"

This was the suicide note Mrs. Florence Walker, landlady at 22 Portland street, Worcester, found today when she broke into the gas-filled room of Fred Brode, World War veteran. Pinned to the note was a dollar bill. Brode's body was nearby.

According to the landlady Brode came to Worcester a week ago from Winchendon, where he left his wife and two children, to look for work. He didn't find it.

Milk Driver Hurt

ROXBURY GIRLS' 'TRIP' HALTED

They were picked up by State Trooper Ralph Hall of the Lunenberg barracks as they walked along route 2 on the road to Leominster. Hall took them to Fitchburg station.

The girls said they left Boston yesterday with two boys in a car in Leominster, they said, they left the car and headed back to Boston on foot. Police contacted the girls' parents who said they had no funds to go to Fitchburg.

Harry J. Callahan Dies in Chelsea

Harry J. Callahan, 41, of Washington street, Chelsea, formerly attached to the circulation department of the Boston Evening American and other Hearst publications, is dead.

He was stricken with a heart attack while participating in a ball game between the married and single members of the Loyal Order of Moose at an outing in Wenham.

Rushed from Wenham to the Chelsea Memorial Hospital by Mayor Edward J. Voke of Chelsea, Callahan died a few hours later.

He was born in South Boston, but moved to Chelsea several years ago. Funeral services will be conducted in St. Rose's Church tomorrow. Burial will be in Holy Cross cemetery, Malden.

Malden Police Seek Boys in $200 Break

Malden police today were seeking two suspects in the robbery of $200 from a safe in the office of L. Grossman & Sons Company.

Police believe boys connected with the theft because of acts of vandalism about the premises. To enter the place the thieves had to scale a fence 12 feet high topped by four feet of barbed wire.

Hunt Woman Thief

Police were today seeking a black-clad woman apparently in mourning, who stole $30 from the cash drawer of the Great Plain avenue, Needham, cleansing establishment while the manager went to the rear of the store.

What the irreverent refer to as the "face-lifting" of the Museum of Natural History in Berkeley street is nearly completed. The museum will re-open in October, having been closed for repairs the greater part of a year.

In discussing the extent of the alterations, Dr. Edward Wigglesworth, the director, disclosed that when it is thrown open to the public it will be known as the New England Museum of Natural History, although it is still under sponsorship of the Boston Society. The first change that will be noted by persons re-visiting it will be the disappearance of the massive main staircase, leading from the first floor to the second. It has been ripped out and replaced by two stairways, smaller and not so picturesque, but a good deal more convenient. The change leaves a larger lobby and more room space on both floors.

Exhibits Given Cleansing, Some Are Made Larger

Some of the old floors of red mosaic have been torn up, rest rooms and lighting have been modernized, and there is a large new workroom in the basement.

A level floor has been installed in the lecture hall. Formerly the floor was sloping and the room could be used for nothing but lectures. Now it will also be available as a laboratory. All of the exhibits have been cleaned and re-labeled. Some of the exhibits of doubtful value have been discarded. There are many important additions in some groups.

Under the new system, emphasis will be placed on the educational nature of the museum. More attention will be paid to the casual visitor in search of knowledge. The bird collection, always one of the most popular, has been enlarged, and will occupy two rooms instead of one.

Horse And Dog Among Guests at the Hotel

A prairie pony and an Australian sheep-dog were house guests at the Parker House one night last week, although few of the other guests realized it.

"Silver Dollar" Brady of Lyman, Wyo. rode his horse, "Cheyenne," up to the desk, the dog trotting at his side, and registered for all three. "Silver Dollar" was in cowboy costume. He reminded the management that an old law says a hotel must provide stable room and pasturage for a horse.

The management reminded him the law had been repealed even before automobiles came in, but they took "Cheyenne" into the rear basement and fixed him up for the night. The sheep-dog accompanied the horse.

"Silver Dollar" has been riding "Cheyenne" around the country for upward of a year, and is now engaged in visiting the mayors of all the large cities of New England.

How the Mighty Fall! But It Could Be Worse

Built for Prince Albert of Monaco, and later the private yacht of Kaiser Wilhelm II, the Hirondelle is being fitted up in a Boston yard for a new career . . . banana boat in the Caribbean trade. She is now the property of the Rhode Island Shipping Company, and will operate between Porto Rico, West Indian ports and Providence.

When she was built the Hirondelle was rated the biggest and finest yacht afloat. It was said she cost the Prince of Monaco $2,000,000. She will go back in commission as a cargo carrier in a few days.

If you want to make something of it, you're welcome to the information that President Roosevelt wears a seven and three-eighths hat . . . the same size "Teddy" Roosevelt wore. The information was brought into town by a New Yorker who makes silk hats and supplies the President.

Negligees that may also be worn as dinner gowns will be the vogue this fall. They replace the night gowns of a season or so ago, which could double as evening gowns. Among the shops carrying them are Stearns, Filene's and Jay's.

The negligees are of brocade or soft wool in bright colors. They are floor length and many are fashioned with long full sleeves.

BEES OPEN IN ST. LOUIS

St. Louis, Aug. 3—Will McKechnie's Bees found the Gas House Gang in a fighting mood as they buzzed into Sportsman's Park for a three-game series, starting this afternoon.

The Cards haven't forgotten that they were stung four times in a row by the Swarm on their last visit to Boston, and they're bent on gaining revenge.

The Bees don't seem to be a bit disturbed over the threats of the French fans.

The Bees can't rise above or fall below their present fifth place standing during the remainder, but they could materially hinder the four game and the fourth place Boston nine.

Jim Turner, the 33-year-old freshman star from Indianapolis who has gained 11 victories to date as against seven defeats, is slated to pitch for the Bees in the opener. He'll be opposed by Bob Lefty Weiland, who spent a few seasons in Boston as a Red Sox.

10,000 See Red Sox Bow in Brockton Game, 6-5

Brockton, Aug. 3—Joe Cronin's Boston Red Sox were forced to walk the plank 6 to 5 in an exhibition tilt with the Cape Cod League All-Stars and the Taunton Luffkin Company All-Stars played before 10,000 spectators here at the high school grounds.

The Taunton-Cape combined effort was difficult in order to give a couple of Red Hose regulars, Marcum, Tomasic and Fox a workout.

Dick Mapp, Taunton southpaw, drove in a brace and Walter "Doc" Berry and Eddie Pellegrini, best of the Cape All-Stars pounded out long triples.

Dom DiMaggio, Boston Red Sox fielder, led both teams with a fellow collecting five for five. In the six innings he batted in a trio of double hits run over the right field wall.

Except Bobo Newsom and Gabrielson, dig the batting for the A. Stars.

The Red Sox saw a pretty neat pitcher in Walter "Doc" Berry, Boston sports writer, in action. In addition to showing them with a few tricks, Doc played a fast game of baseball and was a threat on the mound.

Herb Pennock, Red Sox pitching coach was pegged in his praise of Frank "Quick" Ercoli, Boston Post, who pitched three innings for the Cape All Stars. Herb said that "Quick" had the making of a big time hurler. Ercoli is going into his senior year at Villanova College next month.

All the Red Sox players were at the Cape Cod Country Club where they gave a reception to Manager Joe McCarthy and Coach Hugh Duffy on Monday night. The players presented the two baseball veterans with a handsome traveling bag. The affair was well received by the 500 people present.

'No Speak English' Early Race Betting
Seabiscuit's Speed McCoy Meets Smith

By JACK CONWAY

THERE ARE STILL a few laughs around the race track even when cash customers are tearing up mutuel tickets on horses that have run out of the money.

MR. BOSTON

The stewards at Suffolk Downs were anxious to talk with Misael Villena, Chilean jockey who will ride Sahri II in the $50,000 Massachusetts Handicap on Saturday.

Villena sent back word to the stewards that he didn't speak English, and that he would require the services of an interpreter. Trainer J. Cuvas was also a little short on his English, and in the absence of an interpreter Villena went out to ride in the next race.

Villena's mount was a bad post actor, and when the other horses were in position the Chilean's horse backed out a bit.

"No chance, Mr. Milton," cried Villena in perfect English.

Seabiscuit Shows Speed in Trial

SEABISCUIT which will be the favorite in the $75,000 Massachusetts Handicap at Suffolk Downs on Saturday, displayed a little of the speed which made him the Horse of the Year in America, Seabiscuit did 1:34⅘ for the mile and one-eighth in his workout on Monday, and "Red" Pollard, Seabiscuit's regular pilot, was aboard. Pollard is under contract to ride Seabiscuit in the handicap.

Seabiscuit was brought to Suffolk Downs early so as to have the advantage of working out over the track upon which he will be called to race against the best thoroughbreds in the United States now in training.

Sahri II, the Chilean horse that all the stewards cockeyed as he has been running sensational trials over the track in his preparation for the $75,000 classic against 130 pounds for Seabiscuit.

Early Betting Is Planned

SUFFOLK DOWNS, for the first time in its history, will open betting at 1:30 p. m. on Saturday, the day of the Massachusetts Handicap. There will be special windows at which $2 mutuel tickets will be purchased, and the time of the first race will be advanced from 2 p. m. to 1:30 p. m. to accommodate the crowds which are expected to flock to the track for the opening of the betting.

The system has been employed during the past year at Keeneland Track, and in the opinion of Matt Winn, president of Churchill Downs, it is a success.

John Marx predicts there will be $2,000,000 wagered on the Massachusetts Handicap, and that $500,000 will be bet during the day.

Entries are expected to be 14 to 16 in the starting field. As most of the horses that will start have been real stars. there is certain to be a difference of opinion among the bettors as to the probable winner. That should result in a big play through the mutuels.

McCoy Boxes in Montreal Ring

AL McCOY, New England middleweight champion who made his debut in the ring in Boston a week ago tonight, will box Montreal's top boxing attraction when he takes on Lou Brouillard in Montreal Arena on Monday night.

McCoy will be in fine condition for Smith as he got razor sharp in Boston's ring wars. Opponent McCarthy of Lynn, Mass., was one through the McCarthy fusee he battled.

McCoy will be match with Smith at Montreal. McCoy will return to Boston to get ready for his fight and bout with Tony Shuster for the New England heavyweight championship. McCoy won the title from Jack Meehan at Braves Field last December in a fusse in which he was obliged to come from behind to get the duke.

Shuster had the better of the going in the early sessions but McCoy rallied in the late rounds to score with an impressive victory.

Grand Circuit Races Drawing

THE GRAND Circuit races in New England have been attracting considerable attention. The program for the meeting at Rockingham Park, Salem, N. H., is better than the successful meeting which was staged at Old Orchard Beach last week.

Next week the Grand Circuit races will move to Goshen, N. Y., where the Hart event, an $8,000 affair, is slated on Wednesday afternoon. There is a purse of $4,000 for the Walter Hitch event, another feature.

MANY New Records SEEN

WATER "FAST," CRITICS SAY

Motorboat experts make the claim that the Charles River Basin, site of Saturday and Sunday's Hearst regatta, held under the auspices of the Boston Evening American-Sunday Advertiser, has no equal.

The course, a circular one with five buoy wide turns, is tucked snugly between the Harvard and Longfellow bridges, with wonderful vantage points on both the Boston and Cambridge sides of the river.

There are three laps to the five mile race, each lap measuring 1.23 miles, and the waters are so well protected, the chance of encountering smooth water, as good as there are on any racing waters of the country.

TRICKY NAMES

In fact, the ideal set-up for creating new world records is one of the many reasons why the world's greatest pilots come to Boston, the reason why they anticipate the season event more than any other of the outdoor summer season.

Every facility is taken care of in workmanship fashion, hoisting and craning pit service, hotel accommodations, fueling and oiling, and practice tuning-up, with the most competent officials to handle the racing itself.

A partial list of names in Saturday's opening races include the Irish Setter, Flying Express, Fifi Jr., Gold Dust, OK Toots, Trouble Ahead, Face the Music, Jerry's Drop, Lollipop, Maggies Pet, Thirty Swallows of Cognac, Chimp, Donkey Dust, Buckaroo, Sonnyboy, Hangover, Baby Toots, Wicky Wicky, Quarter Point, Hell Diver, Toss Eater and others equally as odd.

Also meanwhile announcement is made that official headquarters will once again be the Hotel Lenox, Clarendon street, starting Friday.

NO ADMISSION PRICE

Among the guests who have already signified their intention of being present at the race is Commodore Daniel Hicks of Stamford, Connecticut, who will be among circles who will be aboard his palatial yacht and will put up at the Boston Yacht Club.

The two-day regatta will be the only one to take place on the Charles River this year, as there will be no special race of any kind.

800 Youngsters At Bees School

The Bees baseball opened at the Hive at 9 o'clock this morning. More than 800 youngsters have already signified their intention of entering and at least 800 were on hand today.

All will be given a preliminary test by Bob Quinn, Jack Onslow and Joe Dugan. Those who qualify will be invited to attend the remaining sessions during the week.

Survivors will be instructed and classified and minor league jobs offered as soon as possible for those who shape up as worthy of such a trial.

The greatest opportunity ever offered New England boys to get started on the path to big league gold and glory.

Kelley Favorite In Scott Mile

George P. Kelley, the former New Hampshire champion who has been named a favorite to win the Walter A. O'Neil memorial athletic event in the 54th annual Boston Park and Athletic games at Caledonian Grove West Roxbury next Saturday afternoon.

The former Unicorn champion will be up against "Hank" Zamparelli, Northeastern, John A. Kelley Arlington, former B. A. A. cross country champion; Paul Donato, Roxbury Memorial A. A. and other stars.

Gonzales Johnson the speedy sophomore star of B. A. A. high jumped was the only other American winner, Johnson co-holder of the world high jump record does it repeatedly with a leap of 6 feet 8 inches.

Bob Kucharski, the great Polish middle distance star, accounted for the only new record of the meet when he captured the 880 yard run in 1:58.8 for a new White City mark.

The smooth-striding Pole defeated R. B. Handley, of Great Britain, with Feichberger, of Austria, third, and Eshbinson, second best of the current American half milers, a distant third.

George Yanoff saw off form did not compete a successful jump in the pole vault won by J. P. Rokers of Austria at 13 feet, 6 inches and Ray Allen of San Francisco's Olympic club, was third in the 16-pound shot put.

Sister Act in Big Regatta

Boat conscious, Elise Tyson of Chestnut Hill, Pa., admires a new mirror in the shape of a ship's wheel. She will race in the open midget class at the big Hearst Regatta on the Charles next Saturday afternoon.

Return visit for Molly Tyson, sister of Elise, who will also compete in the third annual regatta sponsored by the Boston Evening American. Both sisters took part in the regatta last year.

Tyson Sisters Ask No Favors From Men Rivals

The Tyson sisters are nationally recognized motorboat pilots, taking their dangerous chances with the world famous men pilots.

They ask no odds, no favors. In their early twenties they are off with the best of the racers, facing the other fellows with a grin and making him take notice. And they have won their spurs from Maine to California.

The Pennsylvanians were returning over the week-end with their tiny Midget class outfit under the Hangover and Quarter Pint.

They cleaned up on the Charles River Basin at the Hearst Regatta a year back. And they expect another good time at the Boston Hearst Regatta, the Charles River Basin feature on Saturday and Sunday.

There are other fair women and gentle sex pilots competing in the outfit, but these are the two who have made the most consistent showing in the sport. Both are attractive young women of the type that would be noticed anywhere. And both are skilled pilots.

Mollie and Elise are from the same family, but they are as different in appearance as they are in their handling of their speedy craft. They dress like the racing pilots and in the regulation jackets and helmets. There is no difference.

But of course, there is a difference when the two girls are racing during the actual heats. Then the Tyson girls become serious.

Newport, R. I., Aug. 3 (US)—"It must have been rather discouraging to have been on the Endeavour," Harold S. Vanderbilt said as he transferred from his triumphant Ranger to his big yacht, Vara, after the second race.

Vanderbilt was particularly enthused over his mainsail, and devoted much more time to extolling its merits than discussing the races, past or future.

NEW ENGLAND'S GREATEST EVENING NEWSPAPER
BOSTON, TUESDAY AUGUST 3, 1937 13

The American League Shamrocks, who have taken over the Fenway Park football stand vacated last year by the National League Redskins, will play six home games this fall. Some of the games will be played under floodlights, the first coming on September 10. George Kenneally, coach and part owner of the club, promises Boston fans the same wide open basketball-like game that made such a hit here last fall.

Waterfront Ovation Vs. Silence And Seagulls

NEWPORT, R. I., AUG. 3—T. O. M. SOPWITH, twice defeated argonaut in this International yacht series, is having his morning mail and milk delivered at Whistling Buoy No. 7 today.

Austen Lake

Tom has declared a holiday. He wishes to cogitate about his successive lickings, or pick barnacles off his hull, or whistle up some wind. So, as his blue-bottomed Endeavour II inched by the committee boat on Monday afternoon 18 minutes and 22 seconds in arrears of Ranger, he megaphoned for a breathing spell of one day.

[illegible] was mortified in most [illegible] from racing as he passed the final buoy. He is noted as being knighted by King [illegible] VI of the fringes h me the 90ft fullwater sloop which has lain in Tiffany's [illegible] since [illegible] 1924 and has squandered [illegible] in 1932 for the latest model marine [illegible] ing days and a detachment of sailors. And [illegible] is getting, to date, is windless vacuum in Newport's waters.

It might be another American muckerism. Or maybe the A. A. U., the New York boxing commission, and the seaboard politicians have used all the available air. There were many in the spectator fleet which hitched and wallowed behind the Ranger and Endeavour who felt twinges of sympathy. But their sympathy was mainly for themselves.

The coast guard boats policed them way back into the swirling mists where only the foremost caught ghostly glimpses of the distant slivers. And when, finally, the sun melted the haze, there went the Ranger alone, "all, all, alone in the wide sea," as Mr. Coleridge says in his Ancient Mariner, while for all the perceptible motion in the lagging Endeavour it was just a "painted boat upon a painted sea."

Sopwith Forced to 'Take It'

[illegible]

There was nothing that Sopwith could do about it but take the ride.

He couldn't send in the scrubs to take the rest of his licking, as is the custom among beaten football varsities. Nor could he clutch his stomach and gentle down to the floor screaming "foul" as is the usual prize ring dodge.

He could, of course, have refused to take the left-hand turn at the ten-mile buoy and pointed his nose straight for the horizon, as did some of the kibitzing boats in the following gallery. They decided that they had witnessed enough class J sloop racing for another three years, or maybe forever, and sneaked off for their home ports.

Notre Dame Varsity vs. Bloomer Girls

MIKE HAS WHAT THE PRIZE RING CHARACTERS [illegible]

So it turned out to be another boresome performance between a good big man and a not-so-good little man. Even the old saltwater journalists, who like to psychoanalyze the skippers through field glasses and enact the briny equivalent of grandstand managing, picked comfortable coils of hauser on the Argo's deck and enjoyed some hours of sunny snoozing. And many of the passengers on the nearby marine pullmans were seen to read library books, or deal hands of bridge, or summon the waiter to bring more shaved ice and amber nourishment.

Indeed, if there had been solid footing, the patron would have hunted the nearest exits and gone off to a movie. It was that kind of a contest, like Notre Dame's Varsity playing the Bloomer Girls.

Joe DiMaggio Ahead of Ruth's Home Run Record

Reds Work Grissom Hard

New York, Aug. 2 (US)—Joseph Paul DiMaggio, who would rather be known of the "runs-batted-in-ners" than wear Babe Ruth's home run mantle, is now a full game ahead of the pace Ruth set when he made his record of 60 four-baggers in 1927.

When "Jolting Joe" connected for the circuit in Sunday's game against the St. Louis Browns, he brought his total to 31 for the season. Ruth at the height of his circuit-busting career in 1927, did not get 31 four-baggers until his 98th game. Sunday's game was the 89th of the year for the Yankees.

TOUGHEST TARGET

I [illegible] DiMaggio and the Yankee lineup until May 1 [illegible] August two weeks after the start of the season. The 1927 season, in which Ruth banged his record total, started April 12 a month ahead of this year's opening. And Ruth made [illegible] his first total [illegible] the last month of the season.

There's a good deal of difference between the home run [illegible] DiMaggio and those produced by the Babe. Ruth's drives have been very few registered home runs champions and a Maguire is a right-hander.

Ruth, of course, could hook them a mile when he directed right but he had a compact stroke and low-breed right field to shoot at, while DiMaggio, aiming at the rangiest left field in the American League, must [illegible] every one of his home runs a prodigious drive.

Grissom, quite a pitcher in the minors, has been one of the most overworked hurlers in the National League this year. He has pitched in 36 games thus far and has been called on for all sorts of chores, such as running for batters, pinch-hitting, etc.

The [illegible] who [illegible] Carl Hubbell as king of the [illegible] southpaws, has won 21 [illegible] to date, a splendid record for any one toiling with a seventh-place ball club.

A FIGHTER

Grissom's claims to fame don't only include pitching pinch-hitting and running for batters. He's fight at the drop of a hat, and it was pre-season [illegible] of the willingness to throw punches at random that Chuck Dressen picked him for the Reds.

The Reds, at the start of the season, were picked to complete with the St. Louis Cardinals for second place [illegible] and at the close of the season [illegible] Reds [illegible] Cubs and the Reds [illegible] Dressen has done a [illegible] with the Cincinnati [illegible] ways [illegible] the farthest advance in winning ballclubs.

And also, with neither Dressen nor Frankie Frisch, who manages the Cardinals, can compete with tough-as-nails Berry Grimes when it comes to getting evicted from ball games for arguing, among other things, with umpires. Grimes reached the honorable total of six evictions on Sunday and that's a record Dressen nor Frisch could ever hope to equal.

Sarah, Jadwiga Likely Finalists

East Hampton, N. Y., Aug. 3 (AP)—Two players who haven't been seen often in the East this year, Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan of Boston and Jadwiga Jedrzejowska of Poland appear likely finalists in the women's invitation tennis tournament at the Maidstone Club.

Showing no signs of her recent illness, Mrs. Fabyan trounced Eleanor Dawson of Los Angeles 6-4, 6-3 in the first round while Miss Jedrzejowska smashed her way to a 6—1, 6—1 victory over Margaret Jessop of Berkeley, Calif.

Injured Boxer in Critical Condition

Pittsburgh Aug. 3 (AP)—Johnny Page, Pittsburgh lightweight injured in a bout last night, with Eddie Zivic, remained unconscious and in a critical condition today in a hospital. Dr. J. L. Yon said Page had a concussion of the brain.

The fight ended in the ninth round. Page slumped in a corner under a barrage of blows. Referee Fred Maiaran stepped between the fighters and awarded Zivic a technical knockout.

Father-Son Tourney Opens

By BILL GRIMES

For many months, youngsters throughout New England have been anxiously looking forward to the Father and Son two-day golf tournament, which started this morning at the Winchester Country Club.

During the past 19 years many golfers have been young and old made the competitive debuts in Winchester Father and Son tournaments.

As usual the field is both large and fast and [illegible] to take a goose egg, with each [illegible] the title.

Jim Reidy and his son Joe are on hand to defend their crown won two years ago. [illegible] the last two years A. Paul Leo Peckham [illegible] to open play Wednesday [illegible] Pat.

The Reidys are [illegible] competition [illegible] have in the past.

MONAHANS DANGEROUS

Dave Whiteside, the state amateur champion, and his son, Malcolm are scheduled to start tomorrow morning and if the youngster does not get the "old man" in too much trouble, the pair, like the state amateur crown, may go down to New Bedford.

However, the Winchester Father and Son is by no means an exclusive battle between the Reidys and the Whitesides.

Young Joe Monahan predicts that he and his father Judge Joseph W. Monahan, will figure strongly in the fight for the championship, as does Harry McGrath, Jr., if Harry Sr., is on his game.

Then too, there are the Gaskins from Pine Burn, Joe, Sr. who play two rounds, the first with Frannie and the second with Joe, Jr., and the Sullivans, from Norfolk, D. [illegible] and Dave, Jr.

And if P. A. can his game proved to be a event the Goodales will be troublesome for any team on the field. The Ivy Boys and Ben, have been playing exceptionally fine golf all season and their success depends on the article of golf the father shoots.

The Goodales are scheduled to play both of their rounds today and P. A. will not require any rocking to be put to sleep tonight.

The Herseys from Wellesley Walter A. Sr. will play his first round with Winthrop and wind up with Francis, will be within hailing distance of the pace setters as will the Barnes, Joe, the boss, and George and Eddie who is Dr. A. V. Rogers and his son Art, who was a semi-finalist in the recent New England amateur championship at Manchester, Vt., expect to finish among the winners.

Tommy Leonard, Sr. from Nashua, N. H., expected to have three of his boys with him this year but he says he is an exhausted Boy Scout and couldn't make the trip. However, Tommy has Tommy Jr., the boy who came out of nowhere to reach the semi-finals of the New Englands last week, and Dick.

LEONARDS TO BEAT

Although "Junior" and Dick are better known among the golfing fraternity, "Old Tommy" is a pretty good country golfer in his own right. He qualified in the New Hampshire amateur championship two weeks ago at Keene and recently carded four rounds of 75—73—74—71 at the Manchester, N. H., Country Club.

The former is the junior champion of New Hampshire and was the runner up to Joe Melanson at the recent state championship at Keene. He qualified at Ekwanok with a 76—72—148 and waded right through match play until Eddie Lowery stopped him on the 18th green in the semifinal round.

Dick is the ex-junior champion of New Hampshire, losing the title to "Junior" in the finals a week ago today at Manchester. He posted a 76 for his first qualifying round at Ekwanok but was obliged to withdraw, due to sinus trouble.

With all the respect to the other contenders, the Leonards are the combination to beat.

Walter W. Long is back with his ace. Dave who is six years of age, and Harry Rousseau, Oakley, is looking for some valuable assistance from young Bobby, who is only 8 years old.

As usual, the field will play elected drives and alternate shots and, as usual, many fathers will come in for some serious criticisms for shanking and hooking shots into the "tiger country," from where some of 'em don't have a chance of getting back on the course, let alone the fairways.

Served 14 Years as Mentor

Providence, R. I., Aug. 3 (AP)—J. Fred Powers will not be re-engaged as coach of varsity track at Brown University, Dr. Frederick W. Marvel, director of athletics, announced this morning.

Mrs. Sopwith Big Help to Husband

Newport, R. I., Aug. 3 (AP)—Beside Phyllis Sopwith, wife of the skipper of Endeavour II and after the second defeat of the British sloops, Ranger went like a train.

"Good, maybe being beaten by a better boat," said Mrs. Sopwith, "but I'm sure that each race my husband's interest in the American Cup series will be added quickly over. One always has hopes to the last breath.

"The [illegible] temperament does not change from reaches to [illegible] Thomas Edward she said of the race.

"We're not a bit unhappy about it. It would be a pretty poor sport who didn't say to the victor, 'Jolly good luck to you!'"

Happier Mrs. Sopwith [illegible] Princess Angela [illegible] coloring, gold-bronze hair and eyes. She was wearing a white satin dinner gown with [illegible] sleeves, a stripe strand of pearls and satin sandals.

All day she had said little [illegible] Then [illegible] the rest of the Endeavour. She [illegible] with a dark blue beret on her head. She described herself as a "very insignificant member of Endeavour [illegible] afterguard," but in fact [illegible] active and [illegible] of the race.

She says that the crew [illegible] mark and fight for [illegible] Sopwith with her husband [illegible] from the time of the start [illegible] and a big [illegible] job made of [illegible].

Endeavour had even [illegible] a small [illegible] addition, but it didn't help. She seemed close hauled and aimed more into the teeth of the wind than Ranger which was going off of a windy tangent that helped out her sails to the limit.

By the time the first buoy was reached, 10 miles to windward Vanderbilt had increased Ranger's lead over Endeavour to 10 minutes and a full mile of water lay between defender and challenger when Sopwith made a particularly [illegible] around the marker.

Despite its good start, Ranger had proved a mile an hour faster on the first leg of the voyage.

NO COMPETITION

Once around the turn and headed down the new 10 mile reach, Vanderbilt augmented his silky Genoa with a deep-tailored skysail. But Sopwith, much to the consternation of the experts in the 500 craft that hemmed in the buoys took off his skysail as he turned the marker.

Nor did the British skipper ring up more sail until he was five miles down that stretch. Then his brisk crew unfurled a reaching job which was like trying to reach the moon with a cane.

By the time Ranger got to the second buoy and cleared it with a full sweep toward home, Endeavour was 16 minutes and a mile and three-quarters behind.

It wasn't a contest, of course coming down the final 10-mile straightaway. With a great fleet of yachts, sloops, skiffs, motor launches and dinghies as a convoy, Ranger was a magnificent gull that skimmed straight and true for home.

Sopwith who required roughly more than 18 minutes to haul his boat to the final buoy, where a fleet estimated at 500 and sizes, shapes and condition, was waiting in a vast impressive [illegible] when he arrived. Sopwith had steered the tiller to a duck hank and was leaning against a guy-rope, or halyard, with a tin swung a megaphone in his hand.

He shouted something to the race stewards which was lost in the din of honking, tooting and moaning. But what he said was apparent a moment later when a striped banner ran up the committee boat's masthead—a marine symbol for the letter "M," and meaning, so said Mr. Tom Horgan, the living sea-encyclopedia, that there would be no race on Tuesday.

Silence and the Seagulls

PLAINLY, SOPWITH WAS NAUSEATED by the soft zephyrs and powder-puff winds and trusted that an extra day's delay might bring more boisterous weather and a chance to muscle his way to victory. He had been outboxed in two heats, and T. O. M. hoped to outslug his man in the decading rounds.

As Ranger moved into its anchorage in the outer reaches of the harbor, the seawalls were lined with people. There was a comet's tail of smaller craft trailing in its wake. And from all over the water front came an ear-aching bedlam of whistles, sirens and shouts, to which the usually frosty Vanderbilt waved his hand.

As is the fate of the defeated, Endeavour crept to its mooring in a remote cove where, undoubtedly, Sopwith heaved a sigh big enough to fill his sails.

There was nothing around him but silence and the seagulls.

JUNIOR BIRDMEN OF AMERICA

A Nationwide Organization Devoted To American Youth in Aviation

By L. F. ROSS
Boston Wing Commander

That seaworthy ship, the "S. S. Steel Pier," will once again carry Junior Birdmen on a rollicking cruise to Provincetown and back on Friday, August 13.

JUNIOR BIRDMEN OF AMERICA
(Membership open to all boys and girls 10 to 21)

I wish to join the Junior Birdmen of America. I enclose a dime (well wrapped) for my gold wings and other membership materials.

Print name ____
Street address ____
City ____ State ____
My Age Is Now ____ (Give Your CORRECT Age)

Mail to Junior Birdmen, Boston American Wing, 100 Summer St., Boston, Mass.

No one should let that date fool them, because when Junior Birdmen get together on this annual celebration, all superstitious hoodoos are forgotten.

The ship will weigh anchor at 10 o'clock sharp from Long Wharf at the foot of State street. Junior Birdmen must wear their wings in order to take advantage of the special reduced fare privilege. The regular round trip fare is $1.65, but Junior Birdmen go with a ticket for the round trip at a cost of $1.50 apiece. This also includes meals.

The boat will dock at Boston in the early evening, probably around 6 o'clock. Arrangements may be made for the ship's cafeteria may be patronized.

During the trip, a band will provide dance music and there will be deck games and dancing, while others may join themselves and watch the shoreline scenery, islands and passing boats.

During the two-hour stay at Provincetown the members may take walks about the historic town where artists are seen painting landscapes and numerous gift shops and curio shops are open for business. Bicycles may be hired at the Provincetown Bicycle Shop at reasonable rates.

There are many sandy beaches for swimming. One of the most interesting sights is the spectacle of youngsters diving for coins in the deep water. They are seen along the docks where the Steel Pier lands its party. Last year groups of Birdmen found it hard to tear themselves away from watching this novelty.

The second of a series of four model plane flying contests will be held in Somerville tomorrow at Lincoln Park, Washington street, near Union square.

The events started today at Trum Field and are under the auspices of the Somerville Recreation Commission, with Miss Jane A. McCarthy, handcraft supervisor directing and William J. Macdonald assisting.

Thursday the scene will be Foss Park, Broadway, at the corner of the Northern Artery, and Friday a contest will take place at Dilboy Field, Alewife Brook Parkway, near the Clarendon Hill car barns.

Each contest will begin at 10 a. m. and will consist of H. L. glider, H. L. stick and R. O. G. cabin events. Junior Birdmen rules and specifications will be followed and all Somerville Birdmen are invited to enter. The final event will be for replica, kit and home-made models.

There he will try to wrest the $250 cash first prize and William Randolph Hearst trophy from the other 16 wing champions.

With these boys he will enjoy sight-seeing trips, banquets, a flight piloted by Dick Merrill and Jack Lambie, preview of the Monogram Picture Company's film, "Aluminum Flight," starring these air heroes, a night baseball game, country club life and many surprises.

His trip to and from Atlanta is arranged and paid for by the Boston Evening American.

LISTENING to the sea waves ends, and I'm harking again to the air waves and what they bear in a broadcasting way. Such is the order of the day with a corking vacation concluded and resumption of radio scribing at hand for your sunburned typewriter tapper.

To the turns for tonight then, with a bow in appreciation to the alert Miss bearing M. E. M. initials who posted what was what for ye' subscribers since July 20. May her well-earned pay days at Lake Winnipesaukee be delightful.

This evening has Ben (Old Maestro) Bernie a bit busier than usual (WBZ) at 9 o'clock since Cab (Hot) Calloway and Conrad Thibault are scheduled to sing and sing respectively during that half hour Calloway comes to Bernie's aggregation and Thibault comes to the Tuesday night melodic jaw for the Sanka Dan Cupid Ben Bernie Maestro Mr. [illegible] solo for the air quence of his own hit numbers (WNAC) this evening at 9:30 p. m.

He will be aided by singers Trudy Wood, Jane Rhodes and Jimmy Blair as well as the rhythm chorus.

Although he has not yet turned thirty, Green can point to a decade of musical authorship. He penned his first success, "Coquette," during his undergraduate days at Harvard.

After an impressive string of hits in the popular vein, Johnny decided to make a bid for recognition in the field of more serious music.

He actually achieved this goal when he turned out "Night Club Suite" in which he depicted musically the varying moods and atmosphere of a typical Broadway supper club.

An all Hawaiian impression will [illegible] the "Watch the Fun Go By" broadcast (WEEI) tonight when Al Pearce brings his gang to the microphone at 9 p. m.

It is pointed out that the idea for a Hawaiian broadcast came to Al while he was tuna fishing and gazing westward across the Pacific.

However that may be, Al will have authentic islanders in the [illegible] when Mr. Deane and his wife, Ann, that well-known daughter of the pineapple island, Tizzie Lish, Lish Wilcox, recount her romantic experiences with the pearl divers.

AUDIENCE—WHAT A BREAK FOR WINCHELL!

THIS EAR—THAT AIR

Many memos about the "make" stars come to be duly dealt out here for hearers—so below they are passed along for perusal by way of this first day's work back at the deluged desk.

That well-voiced local "Fur Trapper" program returns to the air (WEEI) tonight for a series of five weekly broadcasts to be heard between 8:30 and 9:00 p. m.

This half hour will include music under the direction of Rakov, the "Fur Trappers" chorus, the Four Rhythm Boys, Frank Sinatra, tenor and Bob Allen, baritone.

FLEETING FLASHES

R. A. R. [illegible] "Magazine of the Air" program will be heard five times weekly effective yesterday.

Betty Winkler, the network [illegible] avenue appearing regularly on [illegible] Can He Top This?" program, returns in [illegible] after a two weeks' vacation—her first in three years.

Fred Grofe is expected to return to the air for another sponsored series this current series leaves the air on August 6.

Betty Wragge of the "Pepper Young's Family" cast has been written out of the script for two weeks to permit her to indulge in a vacation.

Raymond Paige will continue on "Hollywood Hotel" while providing the music for the new program on which Lanny Ross will be singing star.

• • •

Fortuna Bona-Nova was called by Paramount to make a screen test following his recent appear-

"I'll Sell It If I Have to Make a Million Calls!"

And the star salesman bangs his fist on the manager's desk. But the manager only raises an eyebrow.

"You ought to sell anything by making a million calls. Somebody would be sure to buy it."

Every evening 268 637 families read the Boston American. On Sundays the audience increases to 545 696, which means that in 7 days you'd get appearing in the American-Advertiser would make 3 814 333 contacts.

By GEORGE HOLLAND

Although Hub Lawyer John W. Connally, the defended Baby-Face Gleason, J. Plain holdup-slayer who went to the chair, has been mysteriously missing 17 months, friends haven't yet given up hope he'll be located . . . He booked passage on the Fall River liner Priscilla and, his effects were found in his stateroom . . . The venerable ruling which makes Fred Stone a hero in RKO Radio's "A House In The Country," was willed to him by his old friend, Annie Oakley . . .

JUNIOR MAKES GOOD

It may be many a day before the gushing lady drops in again on the wife of a High servitor. The four-yr-old Nepel 1 of the family was playing on th floor, when the visitor, nothing for something of other, was ushered into the living room.

"My, what a nice little boy," she cooed. "And what are you going to be, son, when you grow up."

"Wanna be a dwunk, like Uncle Eddie an' have figars an' a pipe," cracks the kid—without batting an eye . . .

PURGE OF THE FOLS

Provided you're close to a certain lad high in political councils, he'll whisper to you that the federal probe into campaign income taxes and contractors' contributions to political slush funds has a deeper-laid motive.

He'll indicate, for instance, that the real reason for the fed. digging is because New Deal officials want to wipe out numerous ward principals and pols in the Hub and other N. E. communities, through putting on the pressure . . . Monopolizing of control of WPA jobs by these pols is one reason, and the New Dealers want new leaders whose names and reputations, heretofore, have never graced public prints politically . . .

ONCE OVER LIGHTLY

One lad who attended Wonderland Park Saddy nite for the hound-runnings got a shock. But he came out to depart . . . Thieves had jacked up his brand new hack in the parking lot and swiped both rear wheels, tires and all . . . Correspondent wants to know who a chap living in Dorchester should contract a Quincey Sore Throat . . . Delos Chappel back in N. Y. after a home stay (Denver & environs). He'll confer with Dramatist Brian Doherty on "Eat'er Malachy's Miracle," on the Chappell fell sked . . .

Billy Galvin, son of Ed, the Matapan political leader, will this month to enter the Franciscan Friars' novitiate in N. Y. . . . Having immortalized San Francisco, Chicago, Saratoga and other individual communities in celluloid dramedy, the movies now broaden out to take in a whole state . . . It's a film tagged "California." Walter Wanger will do it in technicolor, and the cost will be $2,000,000 . . .

CANINE COINCIDENCE

Dont know if there's any connection here, but at the fourth summer piece, East Jaffrey Actors Associates (at the Inn Theater in N. H.) put on "Love My Dog" . . . Now, beginning next Thurs., they'll do "Ice Baker" . . . We'll have something tomorrow about the welfare work-ing at "Hub Corners," or how to play ring-around-a-rosy with one and all, including the Boston taxpayers . . .

Katharine Cornell's dad, Dr. Peter J. Cornell, visiting her at Marthas inevard . . . But so much does she "want to be a lady" that Dad has to stay in a separate hut . . . Didn't he ever spank her in Buffalo? . . . David C. Woodbury whose play, "Cousin Adelaide Is Psychic," was produced last year by Jack Craig at Centerville, has a new one, "Catch a Comet By Its Tail," going on the boards with the Gerrish Players (Kennebunkport, Me.), Aug. 10 to 14 . . .

Sophie Tucker's trip to Saratoga will have to be a quickie this year. M-G-M has wired Sophie, who left for her yearly engagement at the Piping Rock Club, that she will have to report back in ten days for an audition in "Thoroughbreds Don't Cry." She'll play "Mother Ralph," kindly and understanding owner of a boarding house for jockeys. Studio figures Sophie will eventually fill the shoes of the late beloved Marie Dressler . . .

A lass somewhat in a fog entered the Frenchwood bus terminal (Park sq.) and asked a clerk the fare price to a western city. . . . He told her. "Oh," she gasped, "it can't be that much. I thought I could ride all day for a dollar." But the Eastern Mass. st. Ry doesn't go out that far, no doubt . . . Six of Hollywood's most beautiful showgirls have been stuffed into Selznick's "Nothing Sacred" . . .

Mrs. Pat Campbell Scores in Revival At Cohasset

By PEGGY DOYLE

It was Mrs. Pat Campbell, night last night at Cohasset's Town Hall, where Alexander Dean's South Shore Players are presenting Bayard Veiller's pulse-quickening if perennial mystery play, "The Thirteenth Chair."

Twenty years ago, on the London stage, it served the distinguished English actress as one of her most successful vehicles.

Last night, despite its venerable age, there wasn't a creak in it. What's more, its venerable star—Mrs. C. not only admits, she proclaims, she will be 73 in October—moved across the narrow confines of the Town Hall's stage with not a shade less of the head-turning majesty that was the despair and envy of her lesser sisters of the drama when grandma was a girl.

Her voice, that has been the subject of debate among the upper-crust since the naughty nineties, has a power and a vibrancy that are astounding. Her fine old throat, dark, brown eyes and that prompted the then 56-year-old George Bernard Shaw to address her in a letter as "loveliest, dovliest, baliest,"—have a brilliance and aliveness that you must see to believe.

"In her seventies?" people kept repeating incredulously, in the theaters a demi-tasse lobby between scenes as they sipped coffee. "Incredible. I simply don't believe it. She has too much verve and sparkle. No woman could be that vital at 70."

"The Thirteenth Chair" is a familiar story to most Hub playgoers, and it is hardly necessary to recall that the play's plot is based on a murder which is committed in a locked and darkened room.

Assembled in this room are 13 people, seated in a circle at the behest of a medium, for the sole purpose of discovering the identity of the murderer of a man known to all of them.

The second murder eventually focuses suspicion on a lovely, young girl, Helen O'Neill, who is engaged to the handsome son of the Crosby household in which the ghastly tragedy has occurred.

The medium, Mme. Rosalie La Grange (a role played, of course, by the justly celebrated Campbell. In the recent movie of the same name, Dame Whitty, another English actress of renown, was cast in the medium role. She gave an excellent, if more restrained characterization in a role that had been cut down to accommodate the required Hollywoodish romance angle.

Mrs. Campbell's Mme. LaGrange completely dominates the performance every m Those rare moments when she is mute. That is to say, she may be mute vocally but those magnificently alive eyes of her are forever pointing up the play's action.

Dame Whitty's Cockney medium becomes Balinate in Mrs. Campbell's clear accents. When her daughter has acknowledged their relationship and the girl is about to be arrested for both murders, the elderly actress' voice develops a plushy depth that expresses all her erstwhile repressed mother-love.

Later, when she has occasion to bargain in that daughter's behalf with the hard-shelled Inspector Donohue, her voice range changes to a persuasive lilt calculated to lull the suspicions. No wonder they raved about her when you and I were a twinkle in our father's eye.

Lois Hall, who plays the daughter under suspicion, again rings the bell this week. Her Butterfly's Mary Eastwood has just the right distillation of poison the Cohasset society girl's role calls for. Jane Nancy Creighton, the Jonesport Helen Trent also involved in the police investigation, made a promising debut with the South Shore Players last night. She is a New York debutante, born Brahmin, who after finishing at the exclusive Miss Spence's School a year ago became and continues to be a pupil of Stella Campbell's.

SHIRLEY JOINS THE ARMY

Shirley Temple becomes a soldier in her latest film success, "Wee Willie Winkie," which comes to the Paramount and Fenway on Thursday. Victor McLaglen is Shirley's instructor in this screen version of the Kipling classic and they sure do have fun as the above scene from the film shows.

Feature Ritz Trio in New Met Film

The irrepressible Ritz Brothers, with Alice Faye and Don Ameche are featured in "You Can't Have Everything," Twentieth Century-Fox's new smash musical, which is scheduled for its New England premiere at the Metropolitan on Thursday.

On the program, "Moonlight Capers," a new act written for the screen's latest starring trio, Eddie Rio and Brothers, will be the stage show.

Of particular interest to Hub fans will be Gypsy Rose Lee's screen debut in "You Can't Have Everything."

Others in the cast are Charles Winninger, Tony Martin, Arthur Treacher, Phyllis Brooks, Rubinoff and his violin and Louis Prima and his band.

Gordon and Revel have written five new tunes especially for the picture. They are "Afraid to Dream," "Danger, Love at Work," "The Loveliness of You," "Please Pardon Us, We're in Love," and "You Can't Have Everything."

Assisting Eddie Rio and Brothers, recently of "New Faces," are Neil Kelly, Dawn and Darrow, the Shanghai Wing Troupe and their Mei lovelies, the swing-O-Pators.

Gala Season At Paragon

The life of an amusement park owner is a strenuous one and no one knows this better than Dave Rose, general show owner of Paragon Park at Nantasket Beach.

Nor do the members of his family. Rose, however, on the contrary, all associated with him love it better for they too, put in long hours daily.

Enjoying its best season in ten years, Paragon Park's daily attendance is averaging around 30,000.

General Manager Stone sleeps but three hours daily—from 3 to 6 a. m. Rose insists on safety tests for all mechanical amusements in the park keeps him busy all morning and in the afternoon and evening he and his son and daughter are supervising the management of the seven amusement parks on the New England seacoast.

Summer Playbills

The moon plethora are well represented on summer theater stages this week. The lovely Julie Haydon, who proved such a tremendous hit in the Jacobi-Macaulay play, "The Scandals," in which she played opposite Noel Coward, is starring in Sidney Howard's new comedy, "Yellow Jack," which is this week's offering at Raymond Moore's Cape Playhouse, Dennis.

Anna May Wong, the Oriental girl in Hollywood, is supporting at Ogunquit's Barn Theater, Moore, N. Y., in "Princess Turandot."

At the Olympia

Washington Street Olympia's double-feature bill for tomorrow, Thursday and Friday will be "The Great Gambini" and "Nobody's Baby."

Labels on Draught Malt Drinks in Effect Today

Beer and ale dealers throughout Massachusetts began labelling taps for all draught malt beverages they handle today as the law requiring this marking went into effect.

Introduced by Representative Philip M. Markley of Springfield and approved May 5, the law states:

"No malt beverages shall be sold on draught from a tap, faucet or other draughting device unless there shall plainly appear on or attached to such device, in legible letters, the brand or trade name of the malt beverage so sold therefrom."

The co-operation of brewers, distributors and retailers in fulfilling the provisions of this law was easily secured, as this affords a measure of protection to the public not attainable.

Runaway Congress —On Treadmill

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

The English have a quaint method of "getting" their Congressmen for future identification. There was Cromwell's famous rump Parliament, the barebones Parliament and the do-nothing Parliament.

That system of tabulating our Senators and Houses wouldn't work very well, because they are all out from the same pattern like abalonemites in eastern Pennsylvania.

There has been an inclination to call this the runaway Congress because of its vote on the Supreme Court. It is still wearing the Oregon boot of the party leaders.

At this Congress is doing any running it is on a treadmill. The truth is that our Legislatures are remembered as individuals and not as cattle. Which isn't surprising in a land where they will stop in the middle of a forest fire to hold a beauty contest.

Gem Theft Victim Visits Suspect

State police today refused to state whether Mrs. William J. Kennedy of Southboro had identified John J. Kilgallon, bandit captured at gunpoint last Saturday, as one of the men who robbed her of $125,000 jewels, November, 1934.

Mrs. Kennedy went to Plymouth jail to view the suspect but Lieutenant Joseph L. Ferrari of the state police declined to say whether or not identification is still being sought. Boston police yesterday seized some of the loot stolen from a Middlebrook leather company, four pairs of which Kilgallon and four others are being held.

MONEY TO LOAN

LOANS REDUCED COST

Household's new 3-2-1 rate means this—On the first $100 of any loan the monthly rate is 3%; per month—on the next $100 or part thereof the rate reduces to 2%—and on any new $100 or part thereof the rate reduces still lower to 1%.

This is the lowest rate Household has ever offered in Massachusetts.

Hope for Holy Land

CLOSELY following Boston's enthusiastic meeting at Faneuil Hall comes hopeful news.

By its reference to the Permanent Mandates Commission of the League of Nations, the proposal of a British royal commission to partition Palestine has at least been deferred until September and assured in the meanwhile of thorough scrutiny.

Displaying "marked coolness" to the arguments of the British Government, the Mandates Commission in Geneva has not only rejected the British request for "immediate consideration" of the plan, meaning, of course, IMMEDIATE APPROVAL.

But the Commission has also announced that protests from Jewish and Arab leaders would be fully heard, and that the entire British administration in Palestine since the granting of the original mandate would be reviewed.

These studies will no doubt form the basis for the Commission's formal report to the League council in September.

The council may then "approve, reject or modify" the British Commission's proposal.

World opinion will likewise have to be consulted, however, and Britain's formal treaty with the United States may be put in evidence as clear proof of Britain's expressed intentions in receiving the mandate.

A FULL record such as this will show that Britain's obligation to the League itself, and to sixteen and one-half million Jews throughout the world, is to ADMINISTER THE MANDATE in such a way as to provide IN REALITY a Jewish national home.

As speakers at the Boston mass meeting pointed out, there is no unprecedented racial problem in Palestine that cannot be amicably solved under the mandate.

It will be an historic contribution to world stability, and a long-delayed act of justice to the Jewish people, if the League's Mandate Commission and its council are able to devote themselves successfully to this objective.

Mr. Buckley Talks Facts

STATE Auditor Buckley's recent address in Haverhill commends itself to every New Englander.

Chiding leaders of his party who have conflicting views, Mr. Buckley condemned all attempts to reduce tariffs, pare down war debts and serve the schemes of European politicians.

"What good is it," he asked, "to draft laws to help labor when we do things that take away jobs and put labor on the street?"

He pointed out that it is ridiculous to expect American textile workers to compete with the Japanese or to think American shoe workers can survive the competition of the lowly paid Czechoslovakians.

"We must have tariffs so high that neither Europe nor Asia can flood our markets with their cheaply made products," he advised.

He concluded by warning: "This government is OUR government. It must serve US, not any foreign country."

No thinking man will disagree with the State Auditor when he says that.

We have been a combination of Fairy Godmother and Santa Claus to the world much too long. It is high time that our national motto became Americans First.

Live Long and Like It

LIVING long and happily interests everyone, middle-aged people especially. It is worthwhile, therefore, to listen to the advice of those among us who have achieved and passed the proverbial "three score and ten."

One is Mrs. Elizabeth Flanagan of Dorchester, whose 92d birthday was observed Sunday.

"Strive to be young and you'll be young," she tells us. "Lead your own life. Keep your mind healthy and you'll find your body will take care of itself."

The other, Edwin Fillmore Hambly, "village blacksmith" of Tiverton, R. I., credits his 87 years to an old philosophy, newly phrased. It is:

"Avoid too much JAW work; do more PAW work."

Both are probably right. The flames of zeal and ambition burn brightly in these oldsters. Too many of the rest of us quench the fire with needless tears and worries. As the old saying goes, "we dig our own graves."

Mr. Kennedy Inspires Us

THANKS to Joseph P. Kennedy of Boston, the Maritime Commission's new chairman, the United States is "going places" on the sea.

The Commission, undoubtedly inspired by Mr. Kennedy's determination to win back America's lost eminence, calls for bids on a new luxury liner.

It will be a veritable Leviathan, "fire-proof throughout and able to compete in every way with the best of foreign-owned and operated craft.

Mr. Kennedy intends to end the spectacle of Americans preferring English, French and Italian vessels to those of their own lines. And the whole country is with him in the intention.

We are going to sea in ships—the best ships the world has.

A Sensible Plea for Peace

THE 3000 visitors and numerous C. M. T. C. men who heard Senator Lodge's Sunday address at Fort Devens heard common sense.

"If we as a nation intend to preserve peace, we must prepare for peace," he said. "And the best way to prepare for peace is to be prepared for war."

He told how the American Army, ignored for years, is now only 17th in strength on the list of nations, and urged his audience to work for adequate military defenses—on land, sea and in the air.

We agree with the Senator. All we obtained from the last war was sad experience—all the sadder if we do not use it.

Representative Francis X. Coyne introduces in the Massachusetts Legislature a bill to compel stage and screen players, boxers, wrestlers and all public entertainers to use their real names and not their professional names in all billings in this state.

Mr. Coyne, for some reason or other, is fretting the fact that the latest Hollywood queen may be just a gal from Yaphank, or from Red Hook, Brooklyn. Ruthlessly, he would unmask them, and reveal Mary Astor as the erstwhile Lucille Langhanke, and Ginger Rogers as the one-time Katie McMath.

Drafting laws for the proper labeling of canned goods or dog food, Mr. Coyne is a useful legislator, very likely. But dragging our off-hour romance into the harsh exactitudes of current consumers' research is something else again.

A Hollywood primrose by the river brim may be to him just a little upstart PRIMULA ACAULIS, but why bring that up? And what if the girl did grow up in a tank town, or under the East-side elevated, or on the wrong side of the railroad tracks? There isn't one of us who would not be glad to shed our humdrum self for a brand-new personality and name, if we could get away with it.

VAIN EFFORT

It seems to me that Mr. Coyne is getting steamed up about one of the most singularly harmless of Hollywood vagaries. Names are important in the show business. A girl has just as much right to pick one as she has to select a pretty gown. Who wants to return Marlene Dietsch to Mary Magdalene von Losch Schreiber or Gypsy Rose Lee to Louise Hovick, or Paul Muni to Muni Weisenfreund.

Cagliostro probably never would have gotten anywhere as Giuseppe Balsamo, but here there was intent to deceive. Mr. Coyne charges no such intent, as, obviously there is none, and the public has taken it for granted that the professional name of an entertainer may not be his real name—and doesn't particularly care.

I am informed that several other states are considering such legislation. Dog days are about here. The silly season. Maybe that explains it. But the weeks will pass, and these and other aberrations will be forgotten. Probably such laws would be found unconstitutional. There is a definite property right in an established stage name, as there is in a literary nom de plume.

Mr. Coyne's bill doubtless will be shelved, but it is interesting in the ever-recurring evidence of the yen of state legislators for far-fetched, unimportant and trivial doings.

Back in the bobbie-skirt days of 25 years ago there were 43 bills in various state legislatures providing fines or imprisonment for making or wearing a bobbie-skirt. Wandering along the Main Stem, I was surprised to discover that Broadway takes this legislative threat seriously.

THE BIRTH OF NAMES

Many successful names of the theater and the arts have been devised by numerologists. These ultra-modern necromancers thrive both on Broadway and in Hollywood. Newcomers in the more glamorous professions, particularly the stage and films, are going in for professional name carpentering.

The show shops and movie lots swarm with stories of this person or that who was an elaborate flop until she had her name remodeled.

The name doctors go through a lot of mystifying hocus-pocus, but somehow their science always manages to turn out a euphonious and catchy name which fits this little ogre or that gorgeous Brunhild. Hence our troupers set great store by those names, and the Massachusetts State Legislature is apt to have all Theaspiana in its hair if it starts fooling with stage names.

The idea of numerology, they tell me, is as old as the hills, and its practice, too. But the name is new, and you will find it only in the latest and fattest dictionary. The lexicographer sort of barks away, murmuring that it is "the study of the occult significance of numbers," but nothing more. At that, it is having a big boom all over the world.

NOT STATE'S CONCERN

The name you were born with may be a 24-7. Your lucky and felicitous name would be an 8-6-2. Getting a start in the movies, you go to a numerologist as you go to a dentist or a hair-dresser. The numerologists have an association—the Society of Human Engineering. I believe it is.

They deduce from Pythagoras their "science of numbers," linking digits and destiny in a sure-all nostrum of numbers. That looks like an easy way out, and it would be nice to think that success lay in picking a meiliffluous or lucky name.

But stage names, at any rate are catchy and easy on the eye and ear, and it seems to this department that the fact that they may be synthesize is no business of the Massachusetts legislature.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

O. O. McIntyre

New York, Aug. 3—Rudy Vallee, for years America's No. 1 Heart Throb, is the despair of his valet, his women friends, business associates and tailors. He is the least clothes conscious of the celebrities, refusing to subscribe to more than one fitting when he freshens up his wardrobe.

Photographers who take his picture for publicity purposes always have to tidy him up before pressing their bulbs when he comes for a sitting. He is good natured about it and submits to their suggestions, but left to his own devices, he's soon back in the old sartorial rut.

He once appeared at a benefit in dinner jacket and tan oxfords. When chided for the distinction he grinned sheepishly and sent out to the drug store for a bottle of white shoe polish. His most atrocious taste, however, is for neckties and he goes on a necktie shopping spree often.

The next most difficult siter, sartorially, for the photographers is Heywood Broun. He, too, is amiable about his lapses and will allow them to comb his hair, pull down his vest and indeed, if necessary, send out for a barber and pair of suspenders to supplant the familiar belt.

Snoring is a common difficulty passed over lightly but there are exceptions. Indeed snorers who have found their affliction a serious one, for instance, an industrialist from Toledo who, when he comes to New York, goes to a private home in a far reach of Brooklyn to sleep because of his stentorian snores.

The woman who rents him the room is totally deaf. Several times he has been asked to leave hotels on account of complaints. Two operations have offered him no relief.

Since Dashiell Hammett, once a Pinkerton detective, made such a ten strike writing mystery stories, magazine editors say they have been flooded with manuscripts from professional crime hunters. But so far no rival to Hammett. The fact is that most of the great mystery stories through the ages have been written by men and women who have led cloistered lives with practically no contact with criminals or the art of tracking them.

The real trick in the mystery story is not so much plot as suspense. Once a writer has made a reader feel that emotion of suspense he need worry little about the weakness or absurdity of plot.

Mystery story writing has always struck me the most engaging of literary pursuits. In no other branch of the trade do writers have so much fun. Usually they find no attractive they live aloof mostly in remote sections of the country.

The illustrious example of the art is, of course, E. Phillips Oppenheim, who has his chateau in France, country estate in England, a yacht and gathers most of his material watching the fashionables around the gaming tables at Monte Carlo. He has rarely worked more than four hours a day and at 70 is still eager to set down his plots.

The late Arthur Somers Roche liked to plot his mystery yarns but disliked the actual writing and put it off until editors were on his neck. Agatha Christie writes most of her tales late at night. She believes night is the most mysterious period and that a writer naturally absorbs this atmosphere.

I heard of a private home on upper Park avenue the other day that is staffed with 19 servants for a family of five. A housekeeper does all the employing and for keeping things running smoothly is paid $10,000 a year and given her own apartment with a secretary-maid. The family has seven automobiles and four chauffeurs. Three months a year they spend in Europe but keep their servants during their absence.

There is Burt MacBride's silly shout a befuddled group in a bar at midnight. Suddenly the door opened and a voice shouted: "McGuire, your house is on fire." One of the party dashed out and, after running break-neck for a block, suddenly stopped and exclaimed: "Can you beat it? My name isn't McGuire."

Listen, World!

How often you ask yourself that question nowadays. How often it seizes you like a numbing hand, as you think of the things that were . . . and the world as it is today.

What's left? Out of all the things you were taught as a child, the facts you accepted, the standards you followed, the faith you clung to—WHAT'S LEFT?

Not much! Hit by hit, the ruthless realism of the Machine Age has shattered those young ideals, wrecked that young confidence, exposed even the commonplace facts which seemed the eternal truth—AND TODAY, WHAT'S LEFT?

Broadcasting recently over a national hookup, Dr. Paul Scherer addressed that bankruptcy. There were no pretty platitudes in that address—no synthetic comfort.

HE TOLD IT ALL

Starkly, without evasion, Dr. Scherer described that desolation which has overtaken us all . . . the desolation we try so vainly to escape in hectic work or hysterical play.

"The walls of life are down," he cried, "and the roof has caved in; across the desolate plain winds blow, and there are thousands of people scurrying crazily back and forth without any shelter . . . The swift years go on subtracting from a man's hope . . . stealing away the things he has relied on, and undermining the very foundations of the self he has built . . . until, as he stands there facing the future, he seems to have no material with which to start.

WHAT'S THE ANSWER?

Then what is the final answer? Have we really come to the last ditch? Has science exposed our youthful faith . . . shown it to be a childish fairy tale? And is there nothing more to human life than machine-age and physiology . . . no dream beyond the cramped horizon of the flesh?

No — this is not the answer! God cannot be mocked nor can man be betrayed by scientist or cynic. There is that within us which will not change. Which cannot be exposed. There is that left which will endure forever.

Science cannot explain those things away, nor can sophistication mock them off the stage. Laboratories have revealed your exact content of water, fat and mineral salts. But no laboratory can tell what Thought is, much less Spirit.

Psychologists can dissect your whims and moods. But no psychologist can explain the mysterious power of Faith—THE MIRACULOUS REBIRTH OF LOVE

"You may snub them, but they go on being true," says Dr. Scherer. And these are a few of them: that the way to happiness is purity, that the way to honor is humility, that the way to peace is faith, that the way to power is love, that the way to greatness is service."

Nations may change, standards may crumble. But deep within you there is a quiet Presence—a noble Hunger. Trust that Presence, serve that Hunger. Dare to believe in them. Dare to fight for them!

On the Nail

Imagine the State of Michigan invaded by a foreign army and a squadron of air-bombers. They capture Detroit and lay Lansing in waste.

Then imagine President Roosevelt declaring invasion to be a "local matter" and putting the defense of Michigan up to the state militia and Governor Murphy.

Well, no American can imagine THAT. It is simply inconceivable.

Yet that is what is taking place in China. The Premier, General Chiang, is trying to "localize" the war in his country. And Japan declares she only wants a "local" chunk of China.

To say the Chinese are peculiar" as Truthful James remarked in the Bret Harte poem, is putting it lightly.

The law is not always a grim affair. "Bottles," a publication of the Illinois Glass Company, prints the following remarkable brief in a trade-mark case in the Federal courts: "Quoting the Chemical National Bank, of New York, first published in a bulletin:

"Ivory is a good trade mark for soap not made of Ivory. Gold Dust washing powder is not made of gold. Old Crow whiskey is not distilled from crows. There is no bull in Bull Durham. There is no cream in cream of tartar, in cold cream or in chocolate creams; no milk in milk weed. These are all as remote from the cow as the cowslip. There is no grape in the grape fruit or bread in the breadfruit. A pineapple is neither pine nor apple; an alligator pear is neither pear nor alligator, and a sugar plum is not a plum. Applebutter is not butter."

The Bible history might have added that there are neither dandies nor lions in the DANDELIONS.

No greater symptom of decadence is conceivable than the desire to destroy the superior. The dream of human equality is the dream of the sheer-mind.

We have not yet achieved equality before the law, so how can we ever achieve mental and physical equality?

The human race instinctively pays tribute to its SUPERIOR MEN, to its Shakespeares—poets, inventors, liberators, leaders of religions, men of SUPERIOR genius.

A "classless society" is contrary to the whole drift of history, which works AGAINST EQUALITY and in favor of SUPERIORITY. Study every plants, trees, animals. A "classless society" is a society of caterpillars.

The tendency today to flatten us all out to a common level will result in some years when everybody will become NOBODY.

The professional "debunking" magazines are slowly going out of business.

The public has discovered that what was legitimate satire and fun some years ago has become a RACKET.

Nothing is more important than exposure of sham. The genuine social and political critic is a necessary antidote to empty-headed optimism and fat-headed complacency. But "debunking" has overplayed its hand. It became a business tarred with insincerity.

The difference between a professional "debunker" and a genuine critic is that the "debunker" is incapable of enthusiasm for anything. He isn't a good hater —he's usually just a bellyacher.

The professional "debunker" today is like the artist, Jimmy McNeil Whistler, who, it is said, used to retire behind a screen in his London studio to manufacture "barbed shafts" to make his guests uncomfortable.

And that was what the public began to see in the professional "debunker" of today—his shafts were "manufactured."

That's That

Is the National Labor Relations Board impartial? "Yes," says President Roosevelt. "No," insist Senator Nye (R.) of North Dakota and Congressman Rankin (D.) of Mississippi. Nye charges the board "seems to have gone out of its way to demonstrate that it is a partisan body rather than a judicial institution; it has disqualified itself as a referee between management and workers."

The fundamental trouble is with the Wagner Labor Act, which the board was created to enforce rather than with the board itself. The law is so one-sided that any enforcement is bound to be one-sided. The theory of the law is that every employer is a devil and every employe is an angel. Employers are not trusted to do anything that is right and decent. And there is nothing employes can do that is wrong.

The announcement by the National Safety Council that the nation's automobile death toll for the first half of 1937 was 17,200—an increase of 2040 over the same period of 1936—is discouraging. More emphasis never has been placed upon the dangers of careless driving and careless walking than during the first six months of this year. And the result is MORE LIVES WASTED.

Automobiles are better and safer than ever, so far as construction is concerned. Every year, the mileage of good highways is increased. Engineering genius seems to solve every phase of the traffic problem except the most important one—HUMAN CARELESSNESS. All kinds of safety devices can be built into motor vehicles and highways but not even experience, it seems, can teach a lot of men and women and children to look where they are driving or walking.

Under the Wage and Hours Bill being debated in the House, a national board would be empowered to fix minimum wages at not less than 40 cents an hour and maximum working hours at not more than 40 a week. The House Labor Committee has accepted an amendment boosting the minimum wage to 70 cents and cutting the working hours to 35.

But the theory of this legislation that all workers can be made prosperous and happy by government edict is correct, prosperity and employment for everybody might be provided by fixing $10 an hour as the minimum wage and 10 hours as the maximum working week. Unfortunately, the problem is not that simple.
